EXTEND SEARCH FOR BANDITS WHO ROBBED LANCASTER, O., BANK

Obtain $10,000 After Assaulting Three Men
In Bank

LANCASTER, O., Oct. 29.—Search was extended throughout the state today for the six men who staged a sensational holdup of the Fairfield National Bank here yesterday and, after assaulting the president, an employee and a customer of the bank, escaped with loot of $10,000.

The bandit sextet fled in a large blue sedan, which police said they believed was stolen recently from Roy W. Brismar of Dayton, O. The car was last seen speeding toward the Hocking Valley on a road south of New Lexington, according to reports received by county authorities.

The holdup took place during the noon hour yesterday. Three of the bandits, wielding weapons, entered the bank and commanded patrons and customers to lie down on the floor.

When H. B. Peters, president of the institution, resisted the command, one of the robbers struck him over the head with the butt of a revolver. Assistant Cashier M. S. Pond, 58, was also assaulted when he feigned ignorance of the combination of the bank's vault.

Rev. W. G. Seaman, pastor of the First M. E. Church, was struck a glancing blow on the side of the head when he was slow in obeying the robber's command that he lie down on the floor.

After subduing their victims, the robbers scooped up all cash lying in sight and fled outside to an automobile which was manned by three accomplices.

Word of the robbery of the bank was spread throughout the town and county immediately and a widespread search was started. The bandits succeeded in making good their get-away, however, in a matter of non-day traffic.

National guardsmen aided in the hunt for the robbers as a dragnet was hastily thrown up around three counties.

BOYNTON LEAVES CHICAGO ON FLIGHT

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Stanley Boynton, 18-year-old flyer of Lexington, Mass., today was winging his way toward Kansas City, Mo., on another leg of his attempt to establish a new junior transcontinental flying record. Boynton, who took off here at 7 a. m., hoped to reach Phoenix, Ariz., by tonight.

EMBEZZLER'S CASE GOES BEFORE JURY

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 29.—Evidence in the case of James E. Casey, who is accused of embezzling $207,000 in funds from the Citizens' National Bank at Gallion, O., of which he formerly was president, will be presented to the federal grand jury next month. It was announced here today by Assistant U. S. District Attorney William McDermott.

OHIO VOTERS ASKED TO CHOOSE BETWEEN DIVERGENT VIEWS

Opposite Pictures
Drawn By Campaign
Speakers

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Voters of Ohio were confronted with two widely divergent views of state and national administrations today as they attempted to decide for whom they will cast their ballots at the forthcoming election, which is only seven days away.

On one side—the Republican—is painted the picture of the achievements of the administrations of President Herbert Hoover and Governor Myers Y. Cooper.

On the other side—the Democratic—these very same administrations are being held up for ridicule and vicious attacks.

That the Democratic opponents "have no program—nothing but talk and nonsense" was the claim made by Governor Cooper at Akron Tuesday night. "They offer no relief program that would give jobs to men out of work; no plan for state highways and secondary roads. Their policy toward taxes is one of negation," he said.

Democratic charges of "extravagance" are "ridiculous." "With his customary prodigality in distributing pre-election promises, Governor Cooper now appeals for votes on the pledge that jobs will be provided by the simple expedient of spending millions of dollars," declared George White, Democratic gubernatorial nominee from Marietta, at an address at Jackson, Attorney William Pickrel, Dayton, Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor, told the same audience that the issue this year is "economy in government."

He said the present state administration had increased the operating costs of state government about $5,000,000. Declaration that a protective tariff and restrictive immigration are necessary for the protection of the American markets for American-made goods was voiced at Sandusky by United States Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch, Republican of Canton, who seeks to retain his senatorial toga.

"Unless we are on guard, the industrial giants across the sea, with the weapon of cheap foreign labor and American capital, will destroy the prosperity of America, will destroy the opportunities of Americans for productive effort, and hard times, want and suffering will be transferred from Europe to America," McCulloch said.

"The campaign which has been conducted throughout the state by Republicans opposing my election has consisted almost wholly of pretense and misrepresentation," asserted Robert J. Bulkley, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, during an address at Cleveland.

"Some of their statements verge on the ridiculous," continued Bulkley. "For instance, when I say that the eighteenth amendment should be repealed, they pretend that immediately upon the repeal all the old saloons will re-open. 'This is impossible and the electorate of Ohio knows it.'"

United States Senator Simeon D. Fess, chairman of the G. O. P. national committee, in a radio talk Tuesday night from Columbus over a joint hook-up of stations WAU and WLW, said that voters throughout the nation next Tuesday will decide "whether they will co-operate with President Hoover in his task to preserve the purchasing power of the American people in a world-wide economic breakdown."

MEEK INHERIT FREEDOM

Texas Guinan Drops Bragadocio When Detectives
Raid Her Nightclub

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—"You're not going to take me too, are you?"

Meekness—That was what Texas Guinan had nothing else but when two plainclothesmen from Inspector McCormick's office walked into her night club early today.

"The place," the two plainclothesmen announced, "is pinched."

Two hundred and fifty guests, more or less startled, looked up in surprise.

The two plainclothesmen peeked under tables and claimed they found five pints of "likker" and two of "champagne."

Then they called upon Tex to produce her manager, Bernard Tann.

They also took Bernard Altman, the head waiter, into custody on a charge of "running a cabaret without a license."

It was then that Tex "pulled" the line that perhaps is destined to go down as history on Broadway.

"You're not," said Tex in a small voice, "going to take me too, are you?"

The two plainclothesmen shook their heads. No, they said, Tann and Altman were enough.

Americans Use "Bobbed" Manners - Still Polite

BY J. L. KILGALLAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Americans have "bobbed" their manners but they are just as polite today as they ever were.

Emily Post, national authority on good manners and author of "Etiquette; The Blue Book of Social Usage" made this assertion in an interview today.

"Manners have become bobbed in this country," she said. "We haven't the time for proxy forms. We no longer write long, personal notes or hold long, formal dinners. We have dispensed with tiresome formalities."

"Essentially we are exactly the same as we used to be. The only excuse for etiquette is to make the world a pleasant place in which to live."

Society has undergone two marked changes in recent years, she said, namely: the attitude toward women in business, and the attitude of parents toward their daughters.

"Years ago a woman of real prominence in society never worked except possibly as a teacher or as an opera singer—never as an actress," Mrs. Post explained. "Do you know, actresses are still taboo. For some curious reason, actresses are taboo in the social register. I don't agree with it."

"Before the war it was unthinkable that a woman of any social standing would accept a position in the mill or in the store. Writers or architects they could be, yes, but their field was limited. Nowadays all women want to go into business."

Society girls no longer marry for money, according to Mrs. Post, and instead of looking forward to marriage as their only career they have "a thousand interests."

Mrs. Post smilingly remarked that society in America today "is a joke" because "almost anybody with money can get in." Asked what happened to New York's famous "400" she replied that "many of them have lost their money and have become the new poor."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Insurgent Republican senators, up for re-election next Tuesday, are fighting their own battles, despite statements of Republican leaders that all candidates bearing the Republican label might claim organizational support.

This is disclosed both in the expense statements of the Republican organizations and the candidates themselves, on file with capital officials today.

One Republican insurgent—W. H. McMaster of South Dakota—spurned an offer of $2,500 from the Republican senatorial committee.

The Republican progressives facing the voters include the veterans, Borah of Idaho, Norris of Nebraska, McMaster, Pine of Oklahoma and Schall of Minnesota.

Both Borah and Norris have criticized the Hoover administration and defended their own insurgent in the tariff and farm relief fights. Borah has criticized the President for failing to make good platform promises.

McMaster, Pine and Schall all are defending their defections from the regular Republican ranks in the senate at various times. Pine is described by a leading administration senator as "running on an anti-Hoover platform."

The Republican senatorial committee, in its latest expense statement, showed contributions of $50,032, virtually all from the Republican national committee, and expenditures of $47,005.

Among the unusual aspects of the progressive senators' fight is the aid given to Sen. Walsh, (D) in Montana, by Sen. La Follette of Wisconsin. Other progressives are understood to have offered aid to Walsh.

TRAIN KILLS TWO

FINDLAY, O., Oct. 29.—Donald Snyder, 17, and Ralph Jennings, 17, are dead today and Isaac W. Smith is suffering from bruises and lacerations as a result of a Baltimore and Ohio express train hitting the truck on which they were riding Tuesday night. The accident occurred at North Baltimore where the three young men resided.

Bids, submitted by twenty-nine contractors, will be considered by the house building committee and the award made after congress meets December 1.

NAME TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY FOR DAUGHERTY

Jay G. Williams Is Appointed

CHILICOTHE, O., Oct. 29.—Former State Representative Jay G. Williams, of Fayette County, today is trustee in bankruptcy for Mal S. Daugherty, former president of the defunct Ohio State Bank at Washington, D. C.

Williams' appointment was made by George Bitzer, referee in bankruptcy, in accord with a vote taken by creditors of the bank who met here Tuesday. His bond was fixed at $75,000.

Daugherty, who attended the meeting, said that he believed all his property had been listed in an inventory filed with Referee Bitzer. He said, however, that if anything is found that was not listed, he will turn it over to the court at once.

W. S. Paxton, Fayette County prosecutor, who also was present at the meeting, announced his intention of appealing to the federal courts from a ruling by Bitzer who held that holders of bonds securing county funds in the Ohio State Bank and in the defunct Peoples' and Groves' Bank, also of Washington, D. C., could not vote on the selection of a trustee, because their claims could not be liquidated.

HOLD CATTLE RUSTLER

MANSFIELD, O., Oct. 29.—Accused of "rustling" cattle and slaughtering them, Lindsey Shelton, 35, was held to the grand jury under $500 bond today.

STENO-CO-ED VOTED HOMECOMING QUEEN

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—For the second time in six months the student body of Ohio State University today spurned a galaxy of sorority-girl beauties and took a stenographer for its queen.

Miss Agnes Heskett, 22-year-old girl from Amanda, O., a senior in the college of education, who spends her afternoon taking dictation in a Columbus office supply store and accordingly was too busy to do any personal campaigning, defeated five sorority girls to be chosen homecoming queen yesterday.

BREAKS DOWN AFTER POLICE GRILLING; HAD BEEN WANDERER

Wife Untrue, Heavily In Debt King Tells Police

HAMILTON, O., Oct. 29.—Charles King, 38-year-old barber and alleged self-confessed murderer of his wife and four small sons, was awaiting hearing today on five warrants which charge him with first-degree murder. King, who was captured after a year's search, is held in Butler County jail here.

He was returned here yesterday from Fairport, O., where he was taken into custody by Lake County Sheriff James Maloney.

J. O. Calhoun, Hamilton Chief of police, announced last night that King had confessed to him that he killed his wife and four children in their home here October 23, 1929 by asphyxiation.

The victims were Mrs. Ethel King, 32; Robert, 14; Leon, 12; Paul, 10; and Keith, 5. Charles, Jr., 7, was the only child to escape. He has been living with friends here since the night his father disappeared following the wholesale slaying.

Chief Calhoun said that King confessed to him that he locked the doors of his home, unscrewed a rap from the main gas line, after the family had gone to bed, and then boarded a train for Lima where he stayed over night.

The allegedly confessed killer said, according to the police head, that he committed the murders because his wife was untrue to him and because he was heavily in debt and had been "hounded" by his creditors.

It was said that the barber wandered around Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania for several months. When he thought "things were quieted down," according to the asserted confession, he went to Fairport, where he was captured.

The asphyxiation killings attracted nationwide attention and joined in the intensive search for the slayer. It was said that King had left a note in his home which stated that he had committed the murders because he was poor. He added: "Don't look for me. I've gone with Ethel and the boys."

King's alleged confession came after hours of grilling by police officers and detectives. He protested for several hours that he knew nothing of the murders. He said his name was J. W. Thomas and that he couldn't understand why he was being held.

He was identified last night by Leo King, a brother, and he then broke down under the severe questioning. He seemed relieved as he told his story indifferently.

BUYS VALVOLINE OIL COMPANY STOCK

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 29.—All of the stock of the Valvoline Oil Co. today is in the possession of Edward W. Edwards, former president of the Paragon Refining Co. Edwards bought the stock Tuesday for $5,500,000.

Some Paragon stockholders filed suit in the federal court at Cleveland Saturday seeking to compel Edwards to buy the Valvoline stock in order that the Paragon company could be liquidated and its sale to the Gulf Refining Co. thereby completed.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Burglars who carted away a 500-pound strong box, containing approximately $1,000, from a local dairy, were sought by police today.

It was believed that the thieves were unable to open the combination of the safe. A part of the mechanism was found on the floor of the office.

BANKER SLAIN DURING HOLD-UP; ROB JEWELER

Chicago Man Resists
Bandits; Escape After Murder

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Two major crimes in which a bank executive was ambushed and fatally wounded and a jeweler held up and robbed of $40,000 in uninsured diamonds challenged Chicago authorities today in their war on organized crime.

Two gunmen leaped upon Courtney R. Merrill, vice president of the United State bank of South Chicago last night, stabbed him and fled without trying to complete their attempted robbery. The banker died from his wounds.

Two bandits surprised the banker in the rear of the bank of which he is an executive. Before the banker could respond, two shots were fired, both of which went wild. When Merrill grappled with the nearest gunman the other plunged a knife into his back twice. Both fled.

Two gunmen held up Max Plan, Chicago jeweler, and robbed him of a bag of jewels worth $40,000. The robbery occurred a few feet north of the Wisconsin state line near Zion City, Ill., where the bandits blocked the road with their car and forced Plan to give up the gems.

Although the jeweler offered no resistance one of the robbers slugged him. The bandit pair then fled toward Chicago. Plan was driving alone to Milwaukee.

POLICE GUARD CHICAGO HOME AFTER DEMAND FOR $50,000

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Police guarded the Riverside home of Carl Sundberg today while attempts were made to trace extortionists who had demanded $50,000 from Sundberg, threatening the lives of his three daughters.

The threat came to Sundberg, vice president of a manufacturing corporation, in the form of a crude letter. The note was made up of letters and figures clipped from a newspaper and pasted on a folder of cheap writing paper.

AND SO IT GOES

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—With the cheers of thousands still ringing in his ears and leaving behind a denunciation of the Republicans for "evading the dry issue," an attack on President Hoover, for signing the present tariff law, former Governor Alfred E. Smith today had left for New York to prepare another broadside against the Republicans to be used tonight when he speaks on farm relief over a nation-wide radio broadcasting hook-up.

At the same time, Republican orators, by radio and rally, were denouncing Smith, advancing the benefits of a protective tariff and other Republican policies and ridiculing the Smith claim that "the Democratic party will bring about real economy by not making unnecessary appropriations."

SENATOR FESS SAYS PEOPLE WILL STAND BY CONSTITUTION

Replies To Raskob's Suggestion Of Wet
Referendum

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—"The American people will stand by the constitution of the United States as the surest guarantee of liberty under law."

This today is the comment of United States Senator Simeon D. Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee, on the recent suggestion of John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, that there be a national referendum on prohibition.

Mr. Raskob's position on the liquor question is well known," said Fess. "His position, as a solution, cannot be that of the American people who will stand by the constitution of the United States as the surest guarantee of liberty under law."

Fess voiced the opinion that Raskob's proposal that the capital gains and loss tax be abolished "will be opposed by more Democrats than Republicans."

Touching upon Raskob's endorsement of the five-day week for working men, Fess said:

"This point has been a subject of consideration for some time by industrial leaders, labor heads, political economists and statesmen of all political faiths. It must be considered in the light of agriculture as well as industry. It raises the question whether you can increase consumption by decreasing the number of days of labor."

"It is an economic problem to be worked out by industry, rather than a political issue to become a football of partisan politics."

REVEAL DIRIGIBLE TRIAL FLIGHT WAS NOT SATISFACTORY

Inquiry Board Hears One Engine Failed During Trial

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The revelation that Squadron Leader R. M. Booth, captain of the British dirigible R-100, considered the only trial flight of his craft's ill-fated sister ship, the R-101, unsatisfactory, was made today during the official British investigation into the causes of the crash of the R-101 near Beauvais, France.

Squadron Leader Booth was one of the forty-eight men who lost their lives when the giant craft plunged to the earth in flames a few hours after leaving Cardington, England, for India.

The dramatic revelation was made by Sir William Jowitt, British attorney general, shortly after the inquiry was resumed today.

Sir William also revealed that one of the R-101's engines stopped completely during the trial flight and was found to be completely out of commission.

These two revelations followed a statement by the attorney general that so far as he could learn no official record had been made by the air ministry of the R-101's trial flight.

It was recalled that during the trial flight, which took the craft over London, the R-101 encountered a severe squall and rainstorm, and it was reported at the time that some damage was done to the fabric of the craft's tail fin.

RECOVER BODIES OF MINE BLAST VICTIMS

MCALISTER, Okla., Oct. 29.—Eight bodies of a crew of twenty-nine miners trapped in the Wheatley No. 4 coal mine by an explosion Monday night were recovered by rescue workers today.

The bodies were found at the eighteenth level of the mine and were badly burned.

The miners had been working on the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth levels of the mine. The finding of the first bodies at the eighteenth level indicated that the men rushed away from the force of the explosion only to perish.

The fate of the remaining twenty-one was a matter of conjecture. If they escaped the force of the explosion and rushed to the lower levels and closed the level doors there still is a possibility that they will be found alive, experts with the rescue crews said.

DENY REPORT PAPER IS NOT SANCTIONED

LONDON, Oct. 29.—A dispatch from London published in New York declaring that the British government's "bitterly disputed" "white paper" on the Palestine situation was prepared and issued by Lord Passfield, British colonial secretary, without the knowledge and sanction of the British cabinet was described as "ridiculous" in authoritative circles here today.

SCHOOLS CLOSED

LANCASTER, O., Oct. 29.—Due to prevalence of infantile paralysis all public schools here are closed today. The order indefinitely closing the schools was issued by the school board today.

MILLIONAIRE IS FREED WHEN RANSOM PAID

Yocum Found Along
Road By Autoist;
Was Unharmed

GALVA, Ill., Oct. 29.—Earl L. Yocum, millionaire banker who was kidnapped Saturday night, returned to his home here today.

His wife is reported to have secured his release by payment of $50,000 ransom.

A motorist picked him up on a state road near Atkinson, about fifteen miles from here, and rushed him to Galva. He appeared to be unharmed.

Before his return a heavily armed posse had left for the Cherry mining district and the mud flats along the Illinois River on what was believed to be the first definite clue to the kidnappers' lair.

Sheriff Charles Nash and Assistant State's Attorney Carl Melin led the expedition.

Nash revealed that five former mud flats farmers disappeared from Galva just before Yocum was abducted.

CROXTON OPENS JOB OF UNEMPLOYMENT; HOLDS CONFERENCE

Lays Groundwork Of Plans To Relieve Jobless

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Remembering the old adage that "charity should begin at home," Fred C. Croxton of Columbus, regional director of the President's unemployment emergency committee, today attacked the problem of Ohio's own unemployment situation.

Croxton's work, which he took up today in a series of conferences with state executives and officials of relief organizations, will form the groundwork through which he will spread the "Ohio idea" of battling unemployment through state and municipal organizations to the other states in those regions where the jobless situation is crucial.

For the past few days, Croxton has been in Washington conferring with Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's emergency committee.

The conferences were called here today for the purpose of considering suggestions to stimulate employment of idle workers.

REJECT APPEALS OF TWO MURDERERS

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Death in the electric chair was decreed for two Ohioans today in decisions which were handed down by the Ohio supreme court here.

The state tribunal rejected the appeals of Bert Walker, of Akron, and Charles Cramer, of Cincinnati. Both men are now awaiting execution in death row at the Ohio penitentiary.

Walker was convicted of the killing of Paulman Harland F. Mannes and Cramer was found guilty of participation in the murder of Robert Clemens, aged Brown County farmer.

FOOTBALL PLAYER SUED FOR DIVORCE

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 29.—Benjamin Pencheff, star halfback of the University of Toledo football team, was named defendant today in a divorce petition which has been filed in Common Pleas Court here by his wife, Marjorie.

Mrs. Pencheff charges gross neglect of duty and asks restoration of her maiden name. The couple was married May 17, 1926.

LOWER LAND VALUE

TIFFIN, O., Oct. 29.—Owners of farm properties in Seneca County today were beneficiaries of a 20 per cent reduction in tax values. The valuation of all rural properties has been lowered to the extent of about $6,000,000, County Auditor Arthur B. Powell announced.

TRUSTEES ESCAPE

MANSFIELD, O., Oct. 29.—Officials of the Mansfield State Reformatory today were searching for Virgil Williamson 23, of Ross County, and Lester Hayes, 23, of Clark County trustees who walked away from the institution's carpenter honor camp.

RIOTS PROTEST ROYAL MARRIAGE

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 29.—While King Boris and his bride Queen Giovanna were enroute to Bulgaria from Italy aboard the royal yacht Czar Ferdinand, communist riots, protesting the mixed marriage, shook the capital today.

Fearing disturbances at Varna, where the citizens are decidedly against the catholic marriage, the royal party changed its plans of landing there. The Czar Ferdinand and will stop at Bourgas instead, and the royal couple will entrain for Sofia from there.

"Down with Fascism" placards were posted all about the Italian legation here, which the police removed immediately.

Police were taking drastic precautions today to prevent further outbreaks. Heavy squadrons of military and police forces were assigned to government buildings, and will be on hand to escort King Boris and his new queen through the streets to the palace on their arrival here.

Americans Use "Bobbed" Manners - Still Polite

BY J. L. KILGALLEN
NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Americans have "bobbed" their manners but they are just as polite today as they ever were.

Emily Post, national authority on good manners and author of "Etiquette; The Blue Book of Social Usage" made this assertion in an interview today.

"Manners have become bobbed in this country," she said. "We haven't the time for proxy forms. We no longer write long, formal notes or hold long, formal dinners. We have dispensed with tiresome formalities."

"Essentially we are exactly the same as we used to be. The only excuse for etiquette is to make the world a pleasant place in which to live."

Society has undergone two marked changes in recent years, she said, namely: the attitude toward women in business, and the attitude of parents toward their daughters.

"Years ago a woman of real prominence in society never worked except possibly as a teacher or as an opera singer—never as an actress," Mrs. Post explained. "Do you know, actresses are still taboo. For some curious reason, actresses are taboo in the social register. I don't agree with it."

Before the war it was unthinkable that a woman of any social standing would accept a position in the mill or in the store. Writers or architects they could be, yes, but their field was limited. Nowadays all women want to go into business."

Society girls no longer marry for money, according to Mrs. Post, and instead of looking forward to marriage as their only career they have "a thousand interests."

Mrs. Post smilingly remarked that society in America today "is a joke" because "almost anybody with money can get in." Asked what happened to New York's famous "400" she replied that "many of them have lost their money and have become the new poor."

INSURGENTS FIGHT THEIR OWN BATTLES FOR NEXT ELECTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Insurgent Republican senators, up for re-election next Tuesday, are fighting their own battles, despite statements of Republican leaders that all candidates bearing the Republican label might claim organizational support.

This was disclosed both in the expense statements of the Republican organizations and the candidates themselves, on file with capitol officials today.

One Republican insurgent—W. H. McMaster of South Dakota—spurned an offer of $2,500 from the Republican senatorial committee.

The Republican progressives facing the voters include the veterans, Borah of Idaho, Norris of Nebraska, McMaster, Pine of Oklahoma and Schall of Minnesota.

Both Borah and Norris have criticized the Hoover administration and defended their own insurrection in the tariff and farm relief fights. Borah has criticized the President for failing to make good platform promises.

BREAKS DOWN AFTER POLICE GRILLING; HAD BEEN WANDERER

Wife Untrue, Heavily In Debt King Tells Police

HAMILTON, O., Oct. 29.—Charles King, 38-year-old barber and alleged self-confessed murderer of his wife and four small sons, was awaiting hearing today on five warrants which charge him with first-degree murder.

King, who was captured after a year's search, is held in Butler County jail here.

He was returned here yesterday from Fairport, O., where he was under custody by Lake County Sheriff James Maloney.

J. O. Calhoun, Hamilton Chief of police, announced last night that King had confessed to him that he killed his wife and four children in their home here October 23, 1929 by asphyxiation.

The victims were Mrs. Ethel King, 32; Robert, 14; Leon, 12; Paul, 10; and Keith, 5. Charles, Jr., was the only child to escape.

He has been living with friends here since the night his father disappeared following the whole-sale slaying.

Chief Calhoun said that King confessed to him that he locked the doors of his home, unscrewed a rap from the main gas line, after the family had gone to bed, and then boarded a train for Lima where he stayed over night.

The allegedly confessed killer said, according to the police head, that he committed the murders because his wife was untrue to him and because he was heavily in debt and had been "hounded" by his creditors.

It was said that the barber wandered around Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania for several months. When he thought "things were quieted down," according to the asserted confession, he went to Fairport, where he was captured.

The asphyxiation killings attracted nationwide attention and police throughout the country joined in the intensive search for the slayer. It was said that King had left a note in his home which stated that he had committed the murders because he was poor. He added: "Don't look for me. I've gone with Ethel and the boys."

King's alleged confession came after hours of grilling by police officers and detectives. He protested for several hours that he knew nothing of the murders. He said his name was J. W. Thomas and that he couldn't understand why he was being held.

He was identified last night by Leo King, a brother, and he then broke down under the severe questioning. He seemed relieved as he told his story indifferently.

NAME TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY FOR DAUGHERTY

Jay G. Williams Is Appointed

CHILLICOTHE, O., Oct. 29.—Former State Representative Jay G. Williams, of Fayette County, today is trustee in bankruptcy for J. M. Daugherty, former president of the defunct Ohio State Bank at Washington, C. H.

Williams' appointment was made by George Bitzer, referee in bankruptcy, in accord with a vote taken by creditors of the bank who met here Tuesday. His bond was fixed at $75,000.

Daugherty, who attended the meeting, said that he believed all his property had been listed in an inventory filed with Referee Bitzer. He said, however, that if anything is found that was not listed, he will turn it over to the court at once.

W. S. Paxton, Fayette County prosecutor, who also was present at the meeting, announced his intention of appealing to the federal courts from a ruling by Bitzer who held that holders of bonds securing county funds in the Ohio State Bank and in the defunct Peoples' and Drovers' Bank, also of Washington, C. H., could not vote on the selection of a trustee, because their claims could not be liquidated.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Accused of "rustling" cattle and slaughtering them, Lindsey Sheldon, 38, was held to the grand jury under $500 bond today.

STENO-CO-ED VOTED HOMECOMING QUEEN

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—For the second time in six months the student body of Ohio State University today spurned a galaxy of sorority-girl beauties and took a stenographer for their queen.

Miss Agnes Heskett, 22-year-old girl from Amanda, O., a senior in the college of education, who spends her afternoon taking dictation in a Columbus office supply store and accordingly was too busy to do any personal campaigning, defeated five sorority girls yesterday in the most spirited campus election in the history of the University.

Sorority girls, many of them campus "celebrities" who had not heard of Miss Heskett two weeks ago, recalled regretfully that it was only last April that Wesley Fessler, all-American football player, turned his back on them and picked Miss Hazel Hauer, a stenographer from his home town, for queen of the junior prom.

Miss Heskett, whose popularity sprang from a little group of Methodist students, grew until it included half a dozen sororities, fifteen fraternities, all unaffiliated students and a majority of the college of law. She is a decided blonde, five feet, three inches tall and weighs 110 pounds.

With Glenn W. Salisbury, general chairman, she will reign over homecoming ceremonies at the University Friday and Saturday as a part of the Ohio State-Wisconsin football game.

Miss Heskett polled nearly 1,100 votes, 300 more than her nearest competitor, Helen Palmer, of Pataskala.

BANKER SLAIN DURING HOLD-UP; ROB JEWELER

Chicago Man Resists Bandits; Escape After Murder

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Two major crimes in which a bank executive was ambushed and fatally wounded and a jeweler held up and robbed of $40,000 in uninsured diamonds challenged Chicago authorities today in their war on organized crime.

Two gunmen leaped upon Courtney R. Merrill, vice president of the Union State Bank of South Chicago last night, stabbed him and fled without trying to complete their attempted robbery. The banker died from his wounds.

Two bandits surprised the banker in the rear of the bank of which he is an executive. Before the banker could respond, two shots were fired, both of which went wild. When Merrill grappled with the nearest gunman the other plunged a knife into his back twice. Earl fled.

Two gunmen held up Max Plan, Chicago jeweler, and robbed him of a bag of jewels worth $40,000. The robbery occurred a few feet north of the Wisconsin state line near Zion City, Ill., where the bandits blocked the road with their car and forced Plan to give up the gems.

Although the jeweler offered no resistance one of the robbers slugged him. The bandit pair then fled toward Chicago. Plan was driving alone to Milwaukee.

POLICE GUARD CHICAGO HOME AFTER DEMAND FOR $50,000

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Police guarded the Riverside home of Carl Sundberg today while attempts were made to trace extortionists who had demanded $50,000 from Sundberg, threatening the lives of his three daughters.

The threat came to Sundberg, vice president of a manufacturing corporation, in the form of a crude letter. The note was made up of letters and figures clipped from a newspaper and pasted on a folder of cheap writing paper.

The police came to Sundberg's home today to guard the lives of his three daughters.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—With the cheers of thousands still ringing in his ears and leaving behind a denunciation of the Republicans as "evading" the dry issue, an attack on President Hoover, for signing the present tariff law, former Governor Alfred E. Smith today had left for New York to prepare another broadside against the Republicans to be used tonight when he speaks on farm relief over a nation-wide radio broadcasting hookup.

At the same time, Republican orators, by radio and rally, were denouncing Smith, advancing the benefits of a protective tariff and other Republican policies and ridiculing the Smith claim that "the Democratic party will bring about real economy by not making unnecessary appropriations."

AND SO IT GOES

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—With the cheers of thousands still ringing in his ears and leaving behind a denunciation of the Republicans as "evading" the dry issue, an attack on President Hoover, for signing the present tariff law, former Governor Alfred E. Smith today had left for New York to prepare another broadside against the Republicans to be used tonight when he speaks on farm relief over a nation-wide radio broadcasting hookup.

At the same time, Republican orators, by radio and rally, were denouncing Smith, advancing the benefits of a protective tariff and other Republican policies and ridiculing the Smith claim that "the Democratic party will bring about real economy by not making unnecessary appropriations."

SENATOR FESS SAYS PEOPLE WILL STAND BY CONSTITUTION

Replies To Raskob's Suggestion Of Wet Referendum

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—"The American people will stand by the constitution of the United States as the surest guarantee of liberty under law."

This today is the comment of United States Senator Simeon D. Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee, on the recent suggestion of John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, that there be a national referendum on prohibition.

"Mr. Raskob's position on the liquor question is well known," said Fess. "His position, as a solution, cannot be that of the American people who will stand by the constitution of the United States as the surest guarantee of liberty under law."

Fess voiced the opinion that Raskob's proposal that the capital gains and loss tax be abolished "will be opposed by more Democrats than Republicans."

Touching upon Raskob's endorsement of the five-day week for working men, Fess said: "This point has been a subject of consideration for some time by industrial leaders, labor heads, political economists and statesmen of all political faiths. It must be considered in the light of agriculture as well as industry. It raises the question whether you can increase consumption by decreasing the number of days of labor."

"It is an economic problem to be worked out by industry, rather than a political issue to become a football of partisan politics."

BURGLARS TAKE BOX WITH $1,000

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Burglars who carted away a $500-pound strong box containing approximately $1,000, from a local dairy, were sought by police today.

It was believed that the thieves were unable to open the combination of the safe. A part of the mechanism was found on the floor of the office.

REVEAL DIRIGIBLE TRIAL FLIGHT WAS NOT SATISFACTORY

Inquiry Board Hears One Engine Failed During Trial

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The revelation that Squadron Leader R. M. Booth, captain of the British dirigible R-100, considered the only trial flight of his craft's ill-fated sister ship, the R-101, unsatisfactory, was made today during the official British investigation into the causes of the crash of the R-101 near Beauvais, France.

Squadron Leader Booth was one of the forty-eight men who lost their lives when the giant craft plunged to the earth in flames a few hours after it left Cardington, England, for India.

The dramatic revelation was made by Sir William Jowitt, British attorney general, shortly after the inquiry was resumed today.

Sir William also revealed that one of the R-101's engines stopped completely during the trial flight and was found to be completely out of commission.

These two revelations followed a statement by the attorney general that so far as he could learn no official record had been made by the air ministry of the R-101's trial flight.

It was recalled that during the test flight, which took the craft over London, the R-101 encountered a severe squall and rainstorm, and it was reported at the time that some damage was done to the fabric of the craft's tail fin.

RECOVER BODIES OF MINE BLAST VICTIMS

McALESTER, Okla., Oct. 29.—Eight bodies of a crew of twenty-nine miners trapped in the Wheatley No. 4 coal mine by an explosion Monday night were recovered by rescue workers today.

The bodies were found at the eighteenth level of the mine and were badly burned.

The miners had been working on the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth levels of the mine. The finding of the first bodies at the eighteenth level indicated that the men rushed away from the force of the explosion only to perish.

The fate of the remaining twenty-one was a matter of conjecture. If they escaped the force of the explosion and rushed to the lower levels and closed the level doors there still is a possibility that they will be found alive, experts with the rescue crews said.

DENY REPORT PAPER IS NOT SANCTIONED

LONDON, Oct. 29.—A dispatch from London published in New York declaring that the British government's bitterly disputed "white paper" on the Palestine situation was prepared and issued by Lord Passfield, British colonial secretary, without the knowledge and sanction of the British cabinet, was described as "ridiculous" in authoritative circles here today.

SCHOOLS CLOSED

LANCASTER, O., Oct. 29.—Due to prevalence of infantile paralysis all public schools here are closed today. The order indefinitely closing the schools was issued by the school board today.

TRUSTIES ESCAPE

MANSFIELD, O., Oct. 29.—Officials of the Mansfield State Reformatory today were searching for Virgil Williamson 23, of Ross County, and Lester Hayes, 23, of Clark County, trustees who walked away from the institution's carpenter shop camp.

PUBLIC SALES

Nov. 5—E. M. Ellis.

MILLIONAIRE IS FREED WHEN RANSOM PAID

Yocum Found Along Road By Autoist; Was Unharmed

GALVA, Ill., Oct. 29.—Earl L. Yocum, millionaire banker who was kidnapped Saturday night, returned to his home here today.

His wife is reported to have secured his release by payment of $50,000 ransom.

A motorist picked him up on a state road near Atkinson, about fifteen miles from here, and rushed him to Galva. He appeared to be unharmed.

Before his return a heavily armed posse had left for the Cherry mining district and the mud flats along the Illinois River on what was believed to be the first definite clue to the kidnapers' lair.

Sheriff Charles Nash and Assistant State's Attorney Carl Melin led the expedition.

Nash revealed that five former mud flats farmers disappeared from Galva just before Yocum was abducted.

CROXTON OPENS JOB OF UNEMPLOYMENT; HOLDS CONFERENCE

Lays Groundwork Of Plans To Relieve Jobless

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Remembering the old adage that "charity should begin at home," Fred C. Croxton of Columbus, regional director of the President's unemployment emergency committee, today attacked the problem of Ohio's own unemployment situation.

Croxton's work, which he took up today in a series of conferences with state executives and officials of relief organizations, will form the groundwork through which he will spread the "Ohio idea" of battling unemployment through state county and municipal organizations to the other states in those regions where the jobless situation is crucial.

For the past few days, Croxton has been in Washington conferring with Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's emergency committee.

The conferences were called here today for the purpose of considering suggestions to stimulate employment of idle workers.

REJECT APPEALS OF TWO MURDERERS

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Death in the electric chair was decreed for two Ohioans today in decisions which were handed down by the Ohio supreme court here.

The state tribunal rejected the appeals of Bert Walker, of Akron, and Charles Cramer, of Cincinnati. Both men are now awaiting execution in death row at the Ohio penitentiary.

Walker was convicted of the killing of Patrolman Harland F. Manes and Cramer was found guilty of participation in the murder of Robert Clemens, aged Brown County farmer.

FOOTBALL PLAYER SUED FOR DIVORCE

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 29.—Benjamin Pencheff, star halfback of the University of Toledo football team, was named defendant today in a divorce petition which has been filed in Common Pleas Court here by his wife, Marjorie.

Mrs. Pencheff charges gross neglect of duty and asks restoration of her maiden name. The couple was married May 17, 1926.

LOWER LAND VALUE

TIFFIN, O., Oct. 29.—Owners of farm properties in Seneca County today are the beneficiaries of a 20 per cent reduction in tax values. The valuation of all rural properties has been lowered to the extent of about $6,000,000, County Auditor Arthur B. Powell announced.

SCHOOLS CLOSED

LANCASTER, O., Oct. 29.—Due to prevalence of infantile paralysis all public schools here are closed today. The order indefinitely closing the schools was issued by the school board today.

PUPILS, TEACHERS, TO PARADE MONDAY FOR SCHOOL TAX LEVY

Approximately 2,100 pupils and teachers in the Xenia public schools will parade Monday afternoon, the day before the election, to give impetus to the campaign favoring five-year continuation of the present three-mill tax levy at the polls next Tuesday.

The object of the parade is to bring home to Xenians the necessity of voting for the levy, enabling them to see more than 2,000 pupils in the public schools, the future citizens of Xenia, whose education will be seriously hampered if the levy should fail to carry.

The procession will move promptly at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Each home room teacher will march with his group. The pupils will march four abreast with one pupil, carrying a flag, as leader. Each school will be provided with several large banners, inscribed on which will be the slogan, "Vote for the three-mill levy." Small grades of the various buildings will march in front of the procession.

Following is the place and manner of formation of each unit at 1:45 p. m., order of march and route of the parade:

Orient Hill—Facing north on West St. at the intersection of Main.

Spring Hill—Facing north on West St. in rear of Orient Hill.

McKinley—Facing south on West St. at the intersection of Main.

Lincoln and East—Facing West on W. Market at the intersection of West.

Central—Facing west on W. Church St. at the intersection of West.

Xenia City School Band—Facing east on Main St. between West and Galloway Sts.

Boy Scouts—Facing East on Main St. between west and Galloway Sts. in rear of band.

Order of march:
Xenia City School Band, Boy

Scouts, Orient Hill, Spring Hill, McKinley, Lincoln and East, Central.

Route of parade:
East on Main to Detroit St., south on Detroit to Third, counter march, north on Detroit to Church, counter march, south on Detroit to Main, east on Main to Columbus. Orient Hill and Spring Hill will then proceed south on Columbus to Second and Third.

McKinley Lincoln, East and Central will proceed north on Columbus; McKinley going west on Market; East and Lincoln East on Market; Central north on Columbus to Church thence west on Church.

INVENTIONS WOULD END DEPRESSION

"The way out of the present business and financial depression is not by curtailing production but by the introduction of new inventions and new products," Harry Toulmin, Dayton, patent attorney, told members of the Xenia Kiwanis Club in his address on "The Way Out," at their dinner meeting at the Elks' Club Tuesday evening.

Mr. Toulmin described the way out of the depressions in other periods, which was brought about by the invention of new discoveries which created new industries and said the same can be done now. His talk proved interesting and instructive to club members.

A new committee will have charge of the meeting during November, members of the October committee being Thearl White, A. A. Conklin, Ralph M. Neeld and H. E. Rice.

AUTOIST FINED

Adjudged guilty of a charge filed by C. A. Devoe, superintendent of schools at Bowersville, accusing him with failure to stop his auto for a school bus which was taking on passengers on a road just off the Hussey Pike, Bert L. Leming, this city, was fined $10 and costs Tuesday afternoon by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, who ordered the fine suspended upon payment of the costs amounting to $7.22.

FESS IS ELECTION EVE SPEAKER

FOLLOWING his usual custom, United States Senator Simeon D. Fess, Yellow Springs, will deliver an address on the eve of the November 4 election at an open meeting at the Opera House Monday night, November 3 at 8 o'clock, it is announced by local Republican leaders.

Senator Fess makes it a practice to wind up the political campaign every two years by giving an address to Republicans of his home county on the eve of the election at the Opera House here. He will probably be the only speaker on the program. Republican leaders are anticipating a large attendance at the final local rally.

WILL ROGERS MOVIE IS P. T. A. BENEFIT

THE ROAD THROUGH THE GRAVEYARD.

PLAINTIFF BRINGS ACTION TO DECLARE WATER MAIN PUBLIC

Suit to have a water main on Forker St. be declared a part of the city water system designated for use of all residents along the street and enjoining the defendant from interfering with the plaintiff's use of it has been filed in Common Pleas Court, against James Scott, 18 Forker St.

The plaintiff sets forth that in 1920 Theodore Sanford, George Mitchell, Enoch Mitchell and the defendant agreed to furnish the labor and excavate a trench along the street in which the main was afterward laid for use of residents along the street. The city furnished the pipe and installed the main free of charge, according to the petition.

Bruce claims he recently obtained a permit from city officials to connect a water line from his dwelling to the main but that the defendant appeared on the scene and warned workmen not to make the connection, claiming the main is his private property. The workmen then refused to go ahead with the project, it is claimed.

George W. Daniels, Springfield, is the plaintiff's attorney.

SUES ON ACCOUNT

Suit for $141.04 has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Frank J. Fletcher against Arthur J. A. Hornick, the plaintiff seeking to recover an amount due on an account for groceries sold the defendant. Bernadina Hornick, as executrix of the estate of John G. Hornick, deceased, is named co-defendant, the plaintiff claiming Arthur Hornick possesses no real or personal property subject to levy but that he is a beneficiary and will receive a legacy of an unknown amount under the will of John G. Hornick. Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiff.

SCHOOL BOND ISSUE URGED BY SPEAKERS AT JAMESTOWN MEET

Support of a proposed $115,000 bond issue to be voted on at the November 4 election by Silvercreek Twp. and Jamestown village residents was urged by speakers at a community meeting held in the present high school gymnasium at Jamestown Tuesday night.

The bond issue is designed to finance erection of a modern new high school building, procure a site and equip the building in an adequate manner.

A letter written by Dr. J. L. Clifton, state director of education, informing the community that continuation of the high school charter in the village is dependent upon approval of the proposed bond issue, was read at the open meeting. Director Clifton said the school charter would be revoked if the bond issue fails to carry and that it would not be renewed until such a time as first class educational facilities are provided in the district.

Dr. L. L. Louthlan, state high school supervisor, and Dr. Bryne, school superintendent of Portage County, addressed the gathering and strongly advocated approval of the bond issue in order that a high standard of education will be obtainable.

FENCERS WILL CLASH

Wittenberg College fencers will open their season with a preliminary match against Antioch College at Yellow Springs November 1. Last year in the first full schedule for foils, epees and sabres, the Lutherans won nearly all their matches.

MRS. ADAM FATH IS CALLED SUDDENLY

Suffering a stroke of apoplexy while on the street in front of her home in Paintersville, Mrs. Nan Fath, 68, wife of Adam Fath, died Wednesday at noon. Mrs. Fath had gone out to a meat wagon in front of her home when stricken. She fell and was dead when persons nearby reached her. She had been in failing health a number of years.

Mrs. Fath was born in Taylor County, West Virginia, May 15, 1862. She had lived in the Paintersville community a number of years. She is survived by her husband and two daughters by a former marriage, Mrs. H. R. Burton, Columbus and Mrs. J. W. Gerard, Port William. Seven grandchildren and a brother, M. M. Kester, S. Detroit St., this city, also survive.

Funeral arrangements have not been made and will be announced later.

NO SCHOOL FRIDAY-TEACHERS TO MEET

Xenia public schools will be dismissed Friday to enable teachers to attend the sixty-first annual convention of the Central Ohio Teachers' Association at Columbus Friday and Saturday. Approximately 10,000 visitors are expected from twelve central Ohio counties and Columbus schools will observe "open house" from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Friday to permit visiting teachers to see classes in session. The general convention sessions will be held in the Columbus Auditorium and in Memorial Hall.

Hallowe'en Season Will Usher In Goblins

O-OOH, O-oooh, it's Hallowe'en again—that night when little boys and girls must obey their fathers and mothers or the goblins will get them if they don't watch out.

So it is Hallowe'en again—but so different from the Hallowe'en celebrated a few years ago when it was the delight of small boys to steal the neighbor's gate and tie it to a telephone pole or steal the farmer's cow and hide it in another part of town. These are a few of the antics of the boys several years ago but today possibly nothing more is harmed than a few windows marked up with soap or a few tired feet from parading the streets or dancing on All Hallow's Eve.

Today the youngsters observe the evening with their masquerade parties, dances or other less boisterous fun. The night still holds its air of mystery, spookiness and weirdness for all this can be accomplished with clever decorations and party ideas. Dressed in a ridiculous costume one can go to a party on Hallowe'en and have the most fun ducking for apples, having your fortune told, trying to bite an apple off a string and other stunts. And did you ever try to pin a tail on a cat when you were blindfolded? And what fun it is at a Hallowe'en dance when everyone is masked and you don't know with whom you are dancing.

Just why Hallowe'en is observed as it is has never been known. Hallowe'en is the Eve of All Hallow's or the eve of All Saint's Day, which is celebrated November 1. It originated in Scotland when it was the custom of each household to light a large bonfire on this night. Later weird and extraordinary features were added to the night's celebrations but just why has never been determined as there is nothing in the church's celebration of All Saint's Day to warrant this. This night, years ago, in England and Ireland, was known as "nutcracking" night when nuts formed the basis of the party's refreshments and evening's entertainment. Fortunes were told with the use of nuts and they were also used in other games. It was here and about the same time that the games of bobbing for apples and biting the apple from the string originated.

So on down through the years Hallowe'en has been celebrated until now it is one of the seasons looked forward to by youngsters for their fun. Even though it will be celebrated quietly this year, the best advice is to be on the lookout for goblins, witches, spooks and ghosts on this night for it is the one night of the year when they are free to rule.—M. M.

PLAINTIFF BRINGS ACTION TO DECLARE WATER MAIN PUBLIC

Suit to have a water main on Forker St. declared a part of the city water system designated for use of all residents along the street and enjoining the defendant from interfering with the plaintiff's use of it has been filed in Common Pleas Court by William Bruce, 15 Forker St., against James Scott, 18 Forker St.

The plaintiff sets forth that in 1920 Theodore Sanford, George Mitchell, Enoch Mitchell and the defendant agreed to furnish the labor and excavate a trench along the street in which the main was afterward laid for use of residents along the street. The city furnished the pipe and installed the main free of charge, according to the petition.

Bruce claims he recently obtained a permit from city officials to connect a water line from his dwelling to the main but that the defendant appeared on the scene and warned workmen not to make the connection, claiming the main is his private property. The workmen then refused to go ahead with the project, it is claimed.

George W. Daniels, Springfield, is the plaintiff's attorney.

SUES ON ACCOUNT

Suit for $141.04 has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Frank J. Fletcher against Arthur J. A. Hornick, the plaintiff seeking to recover an amount due on an account for groceries sold the defendant. Bernadina Hornick, as executrix of the estate of John G. Hornick. Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiff.

SCHOOL BOND ISSUE URGED BY SPEAKERS AT JAMESTOWN MEET

Support of a proposed $115,000 bond issue to be voted on at the November 4 election by Silvercreek Twp. and Jamestown village residents was urged by speakers at a community meeting held in the present high school gymnasium at Jamestown Tuesday night.

The bond issue is designed to finance erection of a modern new high school building, procure a site and equip the building in an adequate manner.

A letter written by Dr. J. L. Clifton, state director of education, informing the community that continuation of the high school charter in the village is dependent upon approval of the proposed bond issue, was read at the open meeting. Director Clifton said the school charter would be revoked if the bond issue fails to carry and that it would not be renewed until such a time as first class educational facilities are provided in the district.

Dr. L. L. Louthan, state high school supervisor, and Dr. Bryne, school superintendent of Portage County, addressed the gathering and strongly advocated approval of the bond issue in order that a high standard of education will be obtainable.

Suffering a stroke of apoplexy while on the street in front of her home in Paintersville, Mrs. Nan Fath, 68, wife of Adam Fath, died Wednesday at noon. Mrs. Fath had gone out to a meat wagon in front of her home when stricken. She fell and was dead when persons nearby reached her. She had been in failing health a number of years.

Mrs. Fath was born in Taylor County, West Virginia, May 15, 1862. She had lived in the Paintersville community a number of years. She is survived by her husband and two daughters by a former marriage, Mrs. H. R. Burton, Columbus and Mrs. J. W. Gerard, Port William. Seven grandchildren and a brother, M. M. Kester, S. Detroit St., this city, also survive.

Funeral arrangements have not been made and will be announced later.

NO SCHOOL FRIDAY-TEACHERS TO MEET

Xenia public schools will be dismissed Friday to enable teachers to attend the sixty-first annual convention of the Central Ohio Teachers' Association at Columbus Friday and Saturday. Approximately 10,000 visitors are expected from twelve central Ohio counties and Columbus schools will observe "open house" from 8:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. Friday to permit visiting teachers to see classes in session. The general convention sessions will be held in the Columbus Auditorium and in Memorial Hall.

Hallowe'en Season Will Usher In Goblins

O-OOH, O-oooh, it's Hallowe'en again—that night when little boys and girls must obey their fathers and mothers or the goblins will get them if they don't watch out.

So it is Hallowe'en again—but so different from the Hallowe'en celebrated a few years ago when it was the delight of small boys to steal the neighbor's gate and tie it to a telephone pole or steal the farmer's cow and hide it in another part of town. These are a few of the antics of the boys several years ago but today possibly nothing more is harmed than a few windows marked up with soap or a few tired feet from parading the streets or dancing on All Hallow's Eve.

Today the youngsters observe the evening with their masquerade parties, dances or other less boisterous fun. The night still holds its air of mystery, spookiness and weirdness for all this can be accomplished with clever decorations and party ideas. Dressed in a ridiculous costume one can go to a party on Hallowe'en and have the most fun ducking for apples, having your fortune told, trying to bite an apple off a string and other stunts. And did you ever try to pin a tail on a cat when you were blindfolded? And what fun it is at a Hallowe'en dance when everyone is masked and you don't know with whom you are dancing.

Just why Hallowe'en is observed as it is has never been known. Hallowe'en is the Eve of All Hallow's or the eve of All Saint's Day, which is celebrated November 1. It originated in Scotland when it was the custom of each household to light a large bonfire on this night. Later weird and extraordinary features were added to the night's celebrations but just why has never been determined as there is nothing in the church's celebration of All Saint's Day to warrant this. This night, years ago, in England and Ireland, was known as "nutcracking night" when nuts formed the basis of the party's refreshments and evening's entertainment. Fortunes were told with the use of nuts and they were also used in other games. It was here and about the same time that the games of bobbing for apples and biting the apple from the string originated.

So on down through the years Hallowe'en has been celebrated until now it is one of the seasons looked forward to by youngsters for their fun. Even though it will be celebrated quietly this year, the best advice is to be on the lookout for goblins, witches, spooks and ghosts on this night for it is the one night of the year when they are free to rule.—M. M.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

JESUS' CONFESSION—The high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed? And Jesus said, I am. ## WHAT'S YOUR VOTE?

Prosperity is up for election, running to overthrow depression. It's for the people to decide which will be chosen. Every man and every woman is privileged to ballot—every day.

Depression has no rightful place with a hundred and twenty million people, exchanging goods and services—capable—accustomed and willing to work—more highly skilled than other peoples—leaders in efficiency and progressiveness—backed by the vast natural resources of the United States. When we make it possible for the man who works to have a job we make it possible for him to buy food for his family and so help all business, including that of the farmer.

The rest of the world is of small importance compared with that free market of 120,000,000 people—homogeneous—of like tastes, habits and aspirations—living under the same laws—free of trade barriers. Foreign trade may be troubled by tariffs and revolutions, but at their peak our exports represented only five and a half billions of dollars of gross business in a year out of a total American income of ninety billions.

Stagnation of circulation is what's the matter with agriculture and with business. Everyone can help to get that circulation moving again. Government can't make Prosperity—alone. Bankers and other business leaders can't make Prosperity—alone. It's the people, united in opinion and purpose and courage, who determine Prosperity. They can elect it—none other.

Ballots that will be validly counted for prosperity are of many kinds. Some one of them every man and woman can cast. For example:

Help a deserving man or a woman to get a little paying work—or, better, a regular job.

Spend wisely and not too timidly and anticipate scheduled expenditures so far as is practicable.

Turn the deaf ear to false, mischievous rumors; and don't repeat them, if you do hear them.

Be willing to pay a fair price. Don't take advantage of the other man's necessity. Recognize that he has as good claim to a fair profit as you.

When a vampire that fattens on the miseries of others shows up, help to make him unpopular.

Discourage calamity howlers.

Keep business moving evenly, and remember that, to the average man, his job is his particular business. When possible, reassure him against his fear of losing it.

Save, but save wisely, not in fright. Invest for the profit that sound enterprise pays and for the added profit that will come after the hysteria of pessimism has passed.

THE NON-VOTER'S REASONS

It would be interesting to look into the minds of the millions of people who will fail to vote at this year's election, and find out just what excuse they give to themselves for their absence from the polls, which is so harmful to the cause of good government.

Excuse No. 1 — "My one vote will make no difference." Perhaps this is the excuse most commonly given. But it is not accepted in other relations of life. No one who was drafted for war service was excused on the ground that his presence alone would make no difference to the army. This is not considered any alibi for not paying taxes. If we start in giving such excuses, our government will go to pieces, all our social organization will fall, business will perish. Each one has to do his part in this world.

Excuse No. 2 — "I was too busy." But the act of voting takes only a few minutes. The country gives us protection from possible foreign and domestic foes, and if it failed to do its work, we should all be lying around idle and hungry, and we should have plenty of time to vote.

Excuse No. 3 — "I do not understand politics, and do not know how to vote." A very popular excuse, particularly with the women folks. It seems a rather indolent point of view, for people to suffer from many evils caused by imperfect government, when these evils could be ended if they would give this public business some intelligent attention.

So the excuses go on, all paltry and unworthy. It all comes down to this, that the non-voters pass the buck to their neighbors, and expect them to provide good government. Buck passers are not popular in Ohio or anywhere else.

EVERYBODY BURNS THE BEANS

Don't be upset. It might happen to anybody. It does happen to everybody. Every cook, at some time or other, lets the string beans burn. It's the easiest thing in the world to do.

A housewife buys three pounds of string beans and sits down in the late afternoon to string them. She gets a little rest while she strings a potful of beans. It's a long job and she's happy it's finished and that part of the evening meal is out of the way.

She puts them on the stove and begins preparing the rest of the meal. She sets the table. The children come home. The telephone rings. A peddler comes to the front door. Her husband arrives and starts telling things that could just as easily wait. Her attention is distracted. She never gives another thought to those beans. And they burn.

Nobody was looking. Nobody, apparently, was even smelling. So the beans are burned. All of them. The pot is almost ruined. She wants to cry, to blame somebody, it must be somebody's fault when the beans burn!

No, it isn't. Everybody burns the beans. It happens in every household and nothing can be done about it. You forget them for a minute or two and they burn. There's something diabolical about string beans. They seem to know that you don't want them to burn—so, just to spite you, they go ahead and burn. Nobody's to blame. Beans are like that, and life is like beans.

It burns, too. It refuses to go calmly along, without trouble, without excitement. You must keep your eye on it every minute and you can't depend on other people to watch your life for you. You spend days, weeks, even years, getting your life in perfect shape and then you forget it for just a minute and come back to find it is spoiled. And you can't blame anybody for it and you can't accuse anybody else of carelessness and you can't do yourself any good by crying.

Everybody burns the beans, everybody messes up life at times. When the beans burn, you put the pot under the faucet and fill it up and have something else for supper. And when your life gets burned, you do just about the same thing. You put that particular dream aside for a while and think about something else and hope you've learned something from that sad experience. The beans may burn, but it isn't a tragedy unless you make it one!

THE QUESTION BOX

—Central Press Wash. Bureau—

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions, nor will the estimated value of old coins be given.

What are some of the high spots in the life of Savonarola?

Savonarola was a noted Italian preacher and reformer who lived from 1452 to 1498. He studied for the priesthood and came into public notice first in 1490 at Florence, Italy, with bold sermons against the corruption and ill-doings of his time. His rapid rise to fame coincided with a period of political disturbance in Florence, the city, long a democratic republic, passing to the power of the Medici. The Medici were driven out by Charles VIII of France, and Savonarola's influence dominated the city. His attacks finally centered on the Pope, Alexander VI, who became hostile to the preacher. He was summoned to Rome, refused, and finally excommunicated from the church in 1497. Savonarola was ordered to discontinue his preaching, but he remained in open defiance. When he lost power in Florence he was imprisoned and tried for heresy and was hanged on May 23, 1498. His writings were numerous.

Politics

Is it true that the bitter attacks made on George Washington and his administration by Philip Freneau were encouraged by Thomas Jefferson?

It is very probably true that Jefferson had much to do with Freneau's attacks on the first president, for Freneau, the first genuine American poet of marked ability, was appointed translator for the state department Aug. 26, 1791, by Jefferson, who induced him to take charge of the violently anti-Federalist National Gazette.

Director

Where was Victor Fleming, the motion picture director, born? Victor Fleming, the director, was born in Pasadena, Cal., in February, 1888.

Population

What is the population of Canada? Also New York City?

The population of the Dominion of Canada, by official estimate as of June 30, 1929, is 9,796,800. It is approximately as populous as New York City, which, according to latest figures, contains 9,900,000 persons within a radius of 19 miles of its city hall, Metropolitan New York.

Areas

What is the area of the state of Michigan as compared with that of Great Britain?

The area of Great Britain, including England, Scotland, Wales, northern Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, is 94,284 square miles. The area of the state of Michigan is 57,980 square miles.

Home Run

On September 22, 1930, did Nick Culp hit the longest home run ever hit at Forbes field? If not, how did it rank?

Nick Culp hit one of the longest home runs on record at Forbes field on September 23, not September 22, 1930. No record was made of the exact distance.

Bo-Broadway

—By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE—

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—The average person who finds himself in a hospital as the result of a traffic accident, got there because he tried to save half a minute crossing the street, when he wasn't going anywhere in particular.

EXCAVATION WATCHERS

New York contractors with an excavating job on hand, of any proportions, are forced to the expense of erecting a tall "yard fence" around the scene of operation, thus obstructing the pedestrian's view of the work.

The sight of a bevy of poor, oppressed foreigners toying with picks and shovels on an excavation job, exercises an unhealthy fascination for the average New Yorker that nothing else can exert.

Once upon a time contractors good-naturedly constructed rough pine rails on the sidewalks fringing the excavation. Several times, however, the crowd that collected was so great and the pressure on the rails so intense that the structure gave way, precipitating the onlookers into the bowels of the earth. Subsequent damage suits were in order.

The contractor's present-day high board fence is his only precaution against not only the pedestrian's inquisitiveness, but also his acquisitiveness.

TAKING ADVANTAGE

A woman got into a crowded subway car the other day, toting a baby. New York is rotten in spots, but it hasn't reached the degree of decay where it will permit a woman to stand in a crowded public conveyance with a baby in her arms. It wasn't ten seconds before the woman I'm talking about had a seat.

Then what do you suppose she did? She handed up the baby to another dame standing in front of her, and a male sap, on the other side of the car, hadn't witnessed the transfer of the infant, rose out of his seat like he'd been shot and forced the infant-toter into his place.

One baby, judiciously apportioned, would seat an army of women.

AND THEN CAME HALLOWE'EN!

SENATOR TOM HEFLIN NOW HAS REAL SCRAP FIGHTING ON HIS HANDS

—CHARLES F. STEWART—

WASHINGTON. — Experienced politicians almost all say that no candidate for elective office ever believes he can be beaten until he is beaten.

Personally I doubt this. There must be exceptions.

It can't be possible that ex-Gov. Jonathan M. Davis really thinks he stands a ghost of a show to take Senator Arthur Capper's toga away from him this year, in Kansas; that C. O. Harris is not certain Senator Morris Sheppard will lick the stuffing out of him in the Lone Star state.

Naturally candidates don't ADMIT that they will be beaten, but they must know it sometimes.

I am quite prepared, however, to agree that Senator J. Thomas Heflin may err as to the lead pipe cinch which he appears to feel that he has on re-election in Alabama.

Tomtom has waged so many campaigns in his nearly 40-year public career that one loses count, trying to foot up the total number of them—without ever once asking a trimming. Such a series of triumphs is calculated to convince any man of 100 per cent invincibility.

If, therefore, John H. Bankhead does trounce him for the senate in November, it is readily conceivable that Tomtom will be, in all sincerity, the most astonished Ku Klux of the present autumn throughout Dixie.

Such is the disagreeable awakening for Cotton Tomtom that the regular Democrats are predicting.

He can't get away with the new stunt he is attempting, they argue. His past fights all have been nomination fights—that is to say, fights between himself and rival Democrats, and when he has won, his erstwhile rivals have pitched in and helped to elect him. And invariably he HAS been elected; of course he has, running as a Democrat—in Alabama!

But now John H. Bankhead is the Democrat and Tomtom is merely the opposition candidate. The situation has been so turned around that, virtually, the senator is in the position of the Democratic nominee's challenger.

Thus reason the regulars—not illogically. In the back of his head Tomtom evidently realizes that it is a state of affairs which has its dangers for him—for he is doing his utmost to impress it upon the voters that his ticket is the Jeffersonian Democratic ticket, testifying in this manner to the high estimate placed by him upon the value of the Democratic label.

It remains to be seen whether or not he is so convinced that he is a better Democrat, as a Jeffersonian Democrat, than John H. Bankhead, as a plain, regular Democrat.

Tomtom gives every evidence of feeling sure he has accomplished this. The regulars, as I get the news, through their headquarters here from Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile, Tuscaloosa and other centers, are equally sure of the contrary.

Between the two I am bound to say that the regulars tell somewhat the more plausible story.

Their version is that Tomtom was strongest at the campaign's opening.

For awhile, they concede, the Democratic state committee's action in barring him from the regular ticket, as an Al Smith boiler, simply looked like having aroused popular sympathy in his favor—but it has worn off, according to the regulars. They admit that he probably would have won an early October election; since then, they insist that his prospects have frizzled steadily. Each day now, they maintain, justifies prediction of a bigger Bankhead majority.

Yet we must remember that Cotton Tom is too busy sawing wood down in Alabama to be wasting any time sending hopeful forecasts up here to Washington, and he has no farflung organization to attend to for him. Much he cares for optimistic publicity anyway!—beyond the borders of the Yaller-Hammer state; it isn't a national office for which he is running.

Before he left the capital for the south the last time, to begin spell-binding, Tomtom promised himself out loud (I heard him) to "feast on John H. Bankhead's bones the day after election."

Oooh! but it sounded ery!

If I were John H. Bankhead I know I never would feel safe about my bones until I had inventoried my entire skeleton, down to the ultimate knuckle, the day after election, and found nothing missing.

Making a Good Cake

First sift the flour before measuring it, for flour in the bag or box packs down on standing, and must be fluffed up. Next, measure it and the other dry ingredients out and sift them together. All measurements are level. If you use sheets of heavy waxed paper for sifting, there won't be an extra dish to wash. Next, measure the shortening, butter, margarine or vegetable fat. Don't be generous in measuring the fat, for too much will make a heavy soggy cake. You will find that the shortening can be more easily measured if it is fairly soft. Let it stand at room temperature for an hour before measuring.

Cream the shortening until it is soft and fluffy, almost the texture of whipped cream. It must be creamed to this stage or the texture of the cake will be coarse. You will find that the softened butter will cream easily. Then begin adding the sugar, a tablespoon at a time, and cream again between each addition.

Don't think you will be able to hurry the creaming process by putting cold butter in a hot bowl. The heat will melt the butter and change its consistency, and will ruin your cake. And don't add the sugar too fast. Now is the time to use lots of "elbow grease" on the batter, not after the flour and egg whites are folded in!

The usual butter cake calls for the egg yolks and whites separated. Beat the yolks well and add to the creamed mixture. And then add the flouring. If you use a genuine, well-known brand of flouring extract you will have a good flavor in your cake. By adding it to the creamed mixture it has a chance to permeate the mass, and will be better blended than when it is added last of all.

Now add the melted chocolate if you are making a devil's food. The chocolate should be melted over hot, not boiling water, and taken from the fire just as soon as possible after it is melted. It is left over the fire, the heat changes its color and flavor. It should be cooled thoroughly before adding to the butter and sugar and egg yolk.

Next, in keeping the texture of your cake fine, add a tablespoon or so of the sifted dry ingredients and mix it well, before adding any of the milk. The recipe will usually tell you to add the dry ingredients and milk alternately. If the milk is added first, it is generally so cold it will curdle the mixture. So begin by putting in a little of the flour first.

18-Day Diet Unscientific

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The popular reduction cure at present is the 18-day diet. In my opinion it is thoroughly unscientific. The very name indicating that the reduction is to be completed in a short time, gives the whole thing away. It is a gaudy promise, opening a magic vista to the poor overweight who wants to become slender right away.

Another objection to it is that it is too vigorous.

The most important thing to take into account about reduction cures is poor, weak, fallible human nature. Overweights get hungry and thirsty. When they are asked to work at a diet which makes them acutely uncomfortable they fail and revert to their regular meals in goodly numbers. They fall off the 18-day diet almost according to schedule. If they are just a little bit overweight they fall off on the third to fifth day. If they are 30 pounds overweight they fall off on the 10th day. If they are really serious, and reduction is imperative, they go to the 18th day. Then they fall to with a cheer, and eat enough in three days to undo all the good done in the last six of the diet.

That, at least, has been my experience in watching them.

Successful reducing must be planned to give the dieter as little discomfort as possible. It must be planned to continue indefinitely. The constitutional tendency of overweight people is to store fat so rapidly that lapses in diet result immediately in undoing the labor of days.

Successful reduction cures depend far more on the organization of the dieter's household, the general planning of habits, the mental attitude of the patient, than they do on the articles or even the amount of food eaten.

Dr. William Osler used to say that getting well of tuberculosis depends more on what you have in your head than what you have in your chest. The same idea holds true for the diabetic, the overweight person, the patient with heart disease, and the patient with ulcer of the stomach.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

P. S. Q. Elmira, N. Y.: "How can I calculate what my weight ought to be?"

Dr. Peters has a clever formula for this. It is as follows:

"Rule to find ideal adult net weight."

"Multiply number of inches over 5 feet in height by 5½, add 110. For example: Height, 5 feet 4 inches—7 times 5½ equal 38½; add 110, gives 148½, ideal weight."

"If under 5 feet multiply number of inches under 5 feet by 5½, and subtract from 110."

From "Diet and Health, With a Key to the Calories," by Lulu Hunt Peters, M. D.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A new pamphlet, "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," by Dr. Clendening, can be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 E. Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlet on "Hygiene of Women" also is available for 10 cents.)

Like Somebody Else

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

Do you know I believe that very often the strenuous efforts you young people make to forget, make you remember all the harder.

I am talking, of course, about your efforts to forget the man or girl with whom you are in love and whom you have lost.

You all have heard about the person who "enjoys poor health." Now, don't we all, at times, enjoy being "sick"? Don't we just revel in being miserable and pitying ourselves?

I think so.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I feel that I need some advice. Maybe you can give it to me. Here is my story:

"Not very long ago I met a very nice boy whom I liked at once. It was love at first sight for me. Well, I had a couple of dates with him, and he seemed to like me. Then something happened. He no longer calls me up. Finally I lost interest. I went with other boys."

"I mentioned his name once or twice. He was pretty popular with both sexes, I guess. One day I happened to ask another girl whether she knew this boy. She replied, 'Oh yes, he's engaged to marry some girl.'"

"This was the last straw. Imagine my chagrin. Ever since that my heart has been broken. I have tried to forget him, but find it impossible. The other night I went to the same winter roast. When he came up to me I said coldly 'Hello,' and walked off. He is going with other girls, I hear, too. That is what makes it so hard. But he makes me all the crazier about him. I ask you now, how can I forget him?"

"FAITHFUL FRIEND: You say you lost interest in him. Then, when you were told that he was engaged to some other girl, you were heart broken. I suppose before you heard he was engaged you thought he might come back to you, which was what you wished, although you had "lost interest." People usually want more of what they cannot have. So when you found that this young man was beyond your reach you wanted him as never before.

Well, my dear, learn this: That when you can't have a thing it's a very safe rule to forget about it. Do for yourself what a wise mother does for her little child when she gets hold of something dangerous. She substitutes something harmless but attractive for the perilous article, and usually the child is satisfied.

You, being older, may not be as contented with the substitute at first, as the little child would be, but you must learn that "if you can't have what you like, you must like what you can have."

And don't revel in self-pity. It's a bad habit to get into. There are tragedies, of course, that come and almost crush us, but generally life treats pretty well those who are brave and take it happily, expecting the best, and putting a gallant face on the ills.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I notice where two girls nearing 30 years of age wondered whether there was a chance for them to get husbands. I will say their chances are bright, for a girl at 30, or even 45, appears real attractive to men of their own age if they are not too independent."

"I married a girl who was not quite 18 and I was only 19. We did not know our own minds at the time. We were divorced after five years. She married again, and so did I. My second marriage was a grand success. I married a girl 32 years old, a happy, smart, contented young woman. Now we have six darling babies under 10 years of age. Our home is full of sunshine at all times."

"That is one mistake too many make in getting married too young. Do not be afraid, Clara and Ethel, that you will not get husbands. You are just the right age to become wives and mothers."

P. H. I am glad you are happily married after your trouble, and thank you for writing.

Remove Fat from Form by Exercise

—By GLADYS GLAD—

The winter season is the season of formal social events. Women in almost every walk of life appear once again in formal evening gowns—from Lizzie Schwartz, of the sausage factory, to Mrs. Gotrocks of the Park avenue residence.

And when midday first dons her snug-fitting evening frock, she may receive a few unpleasant surprises. Lizzie Schwartz may discover that an over-indulgence in sauerkraut and pigs' knuckles has made the lines of her figure to bear an uncomfortably close resemblance to the lines of the sausage that affords her her occupation. Mrs. Gotrocks may discover that the hot summer months have, Shylock-like, exacted their pounds of flesh, and left the contours of her figure as scrawny, as sharp and barren as the rock-ribbed New England coast.

But what midday may find most distressing is the condition of her back. The majority of formal evening gowns are décollete. A firm, well-molded, smooth, white back is almost a necessity. The most beautiful of evening frocks will never look well if it reveals a back that is padded with wads of flabby fat. The woman whose back is thin and scrawny, whose shoulder blades jut out like a pair of angel's wings, can never appear beautiful in a décollete gown.

Begin now to mold the contours of your back. Correct exercises will remove those wads of fat, will round out those sharp, angular lines. Practice the following exercises every day, and by the time the season is in full swing you will be in perfect form.

Stand erect, arms extended sideways at shoulder level. Rotate the arms from the shoulders forward, up and back, describing a circle with the fingertips. Reverse the direction of the circle.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

JESUS' CONFESSION—The high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed? And Jesus said, I am. Then the high priest rent his clothes, and said, What need we any further witnesses? Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death.—Mark 14:61, 62, 63, 64.

WHAT'S YOUR VOTE?

Prosperity is up for election, running to overthrow depression. It's for the people to decide which will be chosen. Every man and every woman is privileged to ballot—every day.

Depression has no rightful place with a hundred and twenty million people, exchanging goods and services—able-bodied and willing to work—more highly skilled than other peoples—leaders in efficiency and progressiveness—backed by the vast natural resources of the United States. When we make it possible for the man who works to have a job, we make it possible for him to buy food for his family and so help all business, including that of the farmer.

The rest of the world is of small importance compared with that free market of 120,000,000 people—homogeneous—of like tastes, habits and aspirations—living under the same laws—free of trade barriers. Foreign trade may be troubled by tariffs and revolutions, but at their peak our exports represented only five and a half billions of dollars of gross business in a year out of a total American income of twenty billions.

Stagnation of circulation is what's the matter with agriculture and with business. Everyone can help to get that circulation moving again. Government can't make Prosperity—alone. Bankers and other business leaders can't make Prosperity—alone. It's the people, united in opinion and purpose and courage, who determine Prosperity. They can elect it—none other.

Ballots that will be validly counted for prosperity are of many kinds. Some one of them every man and woman can cast. For example:

Help a deserving man or a woman to get a little paying work—or, better, a regular job.

Spend wisely and not too timidly, and anticipate scheduled expenditures so far as is practicable.

Turn the deaf ear to false, mischievous rumors; and don't repeat them, if you do hear them.

Be willing to pay a fair price. Don't take advantage of the other man's necessity. Recognize that he has as good claim to a fair profit as you.

When a vampire that fattens on the miseries of others shows up, help to make him unpopular.

Discourage calamity howlers.

Keep business moving evenly, and remember that, to the average man, his job is his particular business. When possible, reassure him against his fear of losing it.

Save, but save wisely, not in fright. Invest for the profit that sound enterprise pays and for the added profit that will come after the hysteria of pessimism has passed.

THE NON-VOTER'S REASONS

It would be interesting to look into the minds of the millions of people who will fail to vote at this year's election, and find out just what excuse they give to themselves for their absence from the polls, which is so harmful to the cause of good government.

Excuse No. 1—"My one vote will make no difference." Perhaps this is the excuse most commonly given. But it is not accepted in other relations of life. No one who was drafted for war service was excused on the ground that his presence alone would make no difference to the army. This is not considered any alibi for not paying taxes. If we start in giving such excuses, our government will go to pieces, all our social organization will fall, business will perish. Each one has to do his part in this world.

Excuse No. 2—"I was too busy." But the act of voting takes only a few minutes. The country gives us protection from possible foreign and domestic foes, and if it failed to do its work, we should all be lying around idle and hungry, and we should have plenty of time to vote.

Excuse No. 3—"I do not understand politics, and do not know how to vote." A very popular excuse, particularly with the women folks. It seems a rather indolent point of view, for people to suffer from many evils caused by imperfect government, when these evils could be ended if they would give this public business some intelligent attention.

So the excuses go on, all pailtry and unworthy. It all comes down to this, that the non-voters pass the buck to their neighbors, and expect them to provide good government. Buck passers are not popular in Ohio or anywhere else.

EVERYBODY BURNS THE BEANS

Don't be upset. It might happen to anybody. It does happen to everybody. Every cook, at some time or other, lets the string beans burn. It's the easiest thing in the world to do.

A housewife buys three pounds of string beans and sits down in the late afternoon to string them. She gets a little rest while she strings a potful of beans. It's a long job and she's happy it's finished and that part of the evening meal is out of the way.

She puts them on the stove and begins preparing the rest of the meal. She sets the table. The children come home. The telephone rings. A peddler comes to the front door. Her husband arrives and starts telling things that could just as easily wait. Her attention is distracted. She never gives another thought to those beans. And they burn.

Nobody was looking. Nobody, apparently, was even smelling. So the beans are burned. All of them. The pot is almost ruined. She wants to cry, to blame somebody, it must be somebody's fault when the beans burn!

No, it isn't. Everybody burns the beans. It happens in every household and nothing can be done about it. You forget them for a minute or two and they burn. There's something diabolical about string beans. They seem to know that you don't want them to burn—so, just to spite you, they go ahead and burn. Nobody's to blame. Beans are like that, and life is like beans.

It burns, too. It refuses to go calmly along, without trouble, without excitement. You must keep your eye on it every minute and you can't depend on other people to watch your life for you. You spend days, weeks, even years, getting your life in perfect shape and then you forget it for just a minute and come back to find it is spoiled. And you can't blame anybody for it and you can't accuse anybody else of carelessness and you can't do yourself any good by crying.

Everybody burns the beans, everybody messes up life at times. When the beans burn, you put the pot under the faucet and fill it up and have something else for supper. And when your life gets burned, you do just about the same thing. You put that particular dream aside for a while and think about something else and hope you've learned something from that sad experience. The beans may burn, but it isn't a tragedy unless you make it one!

THE QUESTION BOX

Central Press Wash. Bureau

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions, nor will the estimated value of old coins be given.

What are some of the high spots in the life of Savonarola? Savonarola was a noted Italian preacher and reformer who lived from 1452 to 1498. He studied for the priesthood and came into public notice first in 1490 at Florence, Italy, with bold sermons against the corruption and ill-doings of his time. His rapid rise to fame coincided with a period of political disturbance in Florence, the city, long a democratic republic, passing to the power of the Medici. The Medici were driven out by Charles VIII of France, and Savonarola's influence dominated the city. His attacks finally centered on the Pope, Alexander VI, who became hostile to the preacher. He was summoned to Rome, refused, and finally excommunicated from the church in 1497. Savonarola was ordered to discontinue his preaching, but he remained in open defiance. When he lost power in Florence he was imprisoned and tried for heresy and was hanged on May 23, 1498. His writings were numerous.

Politics

Is it true that the bitter attacks made on George Washington and his administration by Philip Freneau were encouraged by Thomas Jefferson?

It is very probably true that Jefferson had much to do with Freneau's attacks on the first president, for Freneau, the first genuine American poet of marked ability, was appointed translator for the state department Aug. 26, 1791, by Jefferson, who induced him to take charge of the violently anti-Federalist National Gazette.

Director

Where was Victor Fleming, the motion picture director, born?

Victor Fleming, the director, was born in Pasadena, Cal., in February, 1888.

Population

What is the population of Canada? Also New York City?

The population of the Dominion of Canada, by official estimate as of June 30, 1929, is 9,796,800. It is approximately as populous as New York City, which, according to latest figures, contains 9,900,000 persons within a radius of 19 miles of its city hall, Metropolitan New York.

Areas

What is the area of the state of Michigan as compared with that of Great Britain?

The area of Great Britain, including England, Scotland, Wales, northern Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, is 94,284 square miles. The area of the state of Michigan is 57,980 square miles.

Home Run

On September 22, 1930, did Nick Cullip hit the longest home run ever hit at Forbes field? If not, how did it rank?

Nick Cullip hit one of the longest home runs on record at Forbes field on September 23, 1930. No record was made of the exact distance.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—The average person who finds himself in a hospital as the result of a traffic accident, got there because he tried to save half a minute crossing the street, when he wasn't going anywhere in particular.

EXCAVATION WATCHERS

New York contractors with an excavating job on hand, of any proportions, are forced to the expedient of erecting a tall board fence around the scene of operation, thus obstructing the pedestrian's view of the work.

The sight of a bevy of poor, oppressed foreigners toiling with their picks and shovels on an excavation job, exercises an unhealthy fascination for the average New Yorker that nothing else can exert.

One upon a time contractors good-naturedly constructed rough pine rails on the sidewalks fringing the excavation. Several times, however, the crowd that collected was so great and the pressure on the rails so intense that the structure gave way, precipitating the onlookers into the bowels of the earth. Subsequent damage suits were in order.

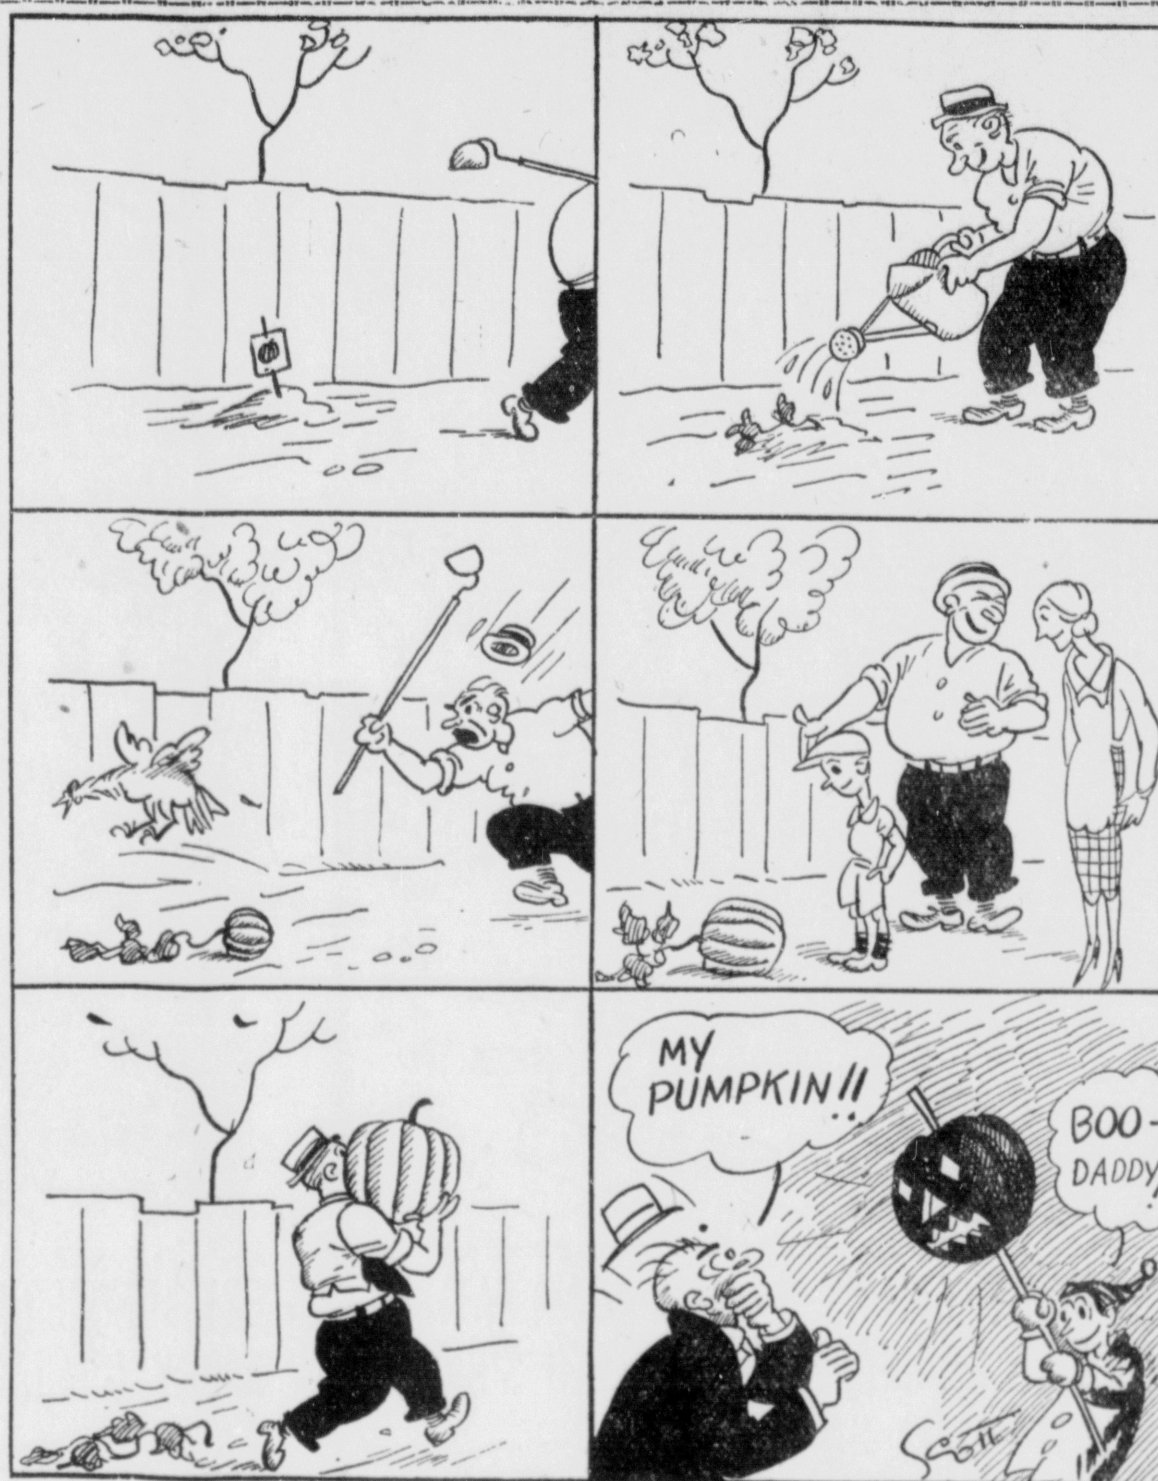

The contractor's present-day high board fence is his only precaution against not only the pedestrian's inquisitiveness, but also his acquisitiveness.

TAKING ADVANTAGE

A woman got into a crowded subway car the other day, toting a baby. New York is rotten in spots; but it hasn't reached the degree of decay where it will permit a woman to stand in a crowded public conveyance with a baby in her arms. It wasn't ten seconds before the woman I'm talking about had a seat.

Then what do you suppose she

AND THEN CAME HALLOWE'EN!

SENATOR TOM HEFLIN NOW HAS REAL SCRAP FIGHTING ON HIS HANDS

WASHINGTON. — Experienced politicians almost all say that no candidate for elective office ever believes he can be beaten until he is beaten.

Personally I doubt this. There must be exceptions.

It can't be possible that ex-Gov. Jonathan M. Davis really thinks he stands a ghost of a show to take the seat of Senator Arthur Capper's toga away from him this year, in Kansas; that C. O. Harris is not certain Senator Morris Sheppard will lick the "tuffing out of him in the Lone Star state."

Naturally candidates don't ADMIT that they will be beaten, but they must know it sometimes.

I am quite prepared, however, to agree that Senator J. Thomas Heflin may err as to the lead pipe cinch which he appears to feel that he has on re-election in Alabama.

Tomtom has waged so many campaigns in his nearly 40-year public career that one loses count, trying to foot up the total number of them—without ever once asking a trim-fingered series of triumphs is calculated to convince any man of 100 per cent invincibility.

If, therefore, John H. Bankhead does trounce him for the senate in November, it is readily conceivable that Tomtom will be, in all sincerity, the most astonished Ku Klux of the present autumn throughout Dixie.

Such is the disagreeable awakening for Cotton Thomas that the regular Democrats are predicting.

He can't get away with the new stunt he is attempting, they argue. His past fights all have been nomination fights—that is to say, fights between himself and rival Democrats, and when he has won, his erstwhile rivals have pitched in and helped to elect him. And invariably he HAS been elected; for course he has, running as a Democrat—in Alabama!

But now John H. Bankhead is the Democrat and Tomtom is merely the opposition candidate. The situation has been so turned around that, virtually, the senator is in the position of the Democratic nominee's challenger.

Thus reason the regulars—not illogically.

In the back of his head Tomtom evidently realizes that it is a state of affairs which has its dangers for him—for he is doing his utmost to impress it upon the voters that his ticket is the Jeffersonian Democratic ticket, testifying in this manner to the high estimate placed by him upon the value of the Democratic label.

It remains to be seen whether or not the voters are convinced that he is a better Democrat, as a Jeffersonian Democrat, than John H. Bankhead, as a plain, regular Democrat.

Tomtom gives every evidence of feeling sure he has accomplished this.

The regulars, as I get the news, through their headquarters here from Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile, Tuscaloosa and other centers, are equally sure of the contrary.

Between the two I am bound to did? She handed up the baby to another dame, standing in front of her; and a male Sap, on the other side of the car, who hadn't witnessed the transfer of the infant, shot out of his seat like he'd been shot and forced the infant-toler into his place.

One baby, judiciously apportioned, would seat an army of women.

say that the regulars tell somewhat the more plausible story. Their version is that Tomtom was strongest at the campaign's opening.

For awhile, they concede, the Democratic state committee's action in barring him from the regular ticket, as an Al Smith bolter, simply looked like having aroused popular sympathy in his favor—but it has worn off, according to the regulars.

They admit that he probably would have won an early October election; since then, they insist that his prospects have frizzled steadily. Each day now, they maintain, justifies prediction of a bigger Bankhead majority.

Yet we must remember that Cotton Tom is too busy sawing wood down in Alabama to be wasting any time sending hopeful forecasts up here to Washington, and he has no farflung organization to attend to for him. Much he cares for optimistic publicity "anyway!"—beyond the borders of the Yaller-Hammer state; it isn't a national office for which he is running.

Before he left the capital for the south the last time, to begin spell-binding, Tomtom promised himself out loud (I heard him) to "feast on John H. Bankhead's bones the day after election."

Oooh! but it sounded ery!

If I were John H. Bankhead I know I never would feel safe about my bones until I had invented my entire skeleton, down to the ultimate knuckle, the day after election, and found nothing missing.

Making a Good Cake

First sift the flour before measuring it, for flour in the bag or box packs down on standing and must be fluffed up. Next, measure it and the other dry ingredients out and sift them together. All measurements are level. If you use sheets of heavy waxed paper for sifting, there won't be an extra dash of "wash."

Measure the shortening, butter, margarine or vegetable fat. Don't be generous in measuring the fat, for too much will make a heavy, soggy cake. You will find that the shortening can be more easily measured if it is fairly soft. Let it stand at room temperature for an hour before measuring.

Cream the shortening until it is soft and fluffy, almost the texture of whipped cream. It must be creamed to this stage or the texture of the cake will be coarse. You will find that the softened butter will cream easily. Then begin adding the sugar, a tablespoon at a time, and cream again between each addition.

Don't think you will be able to hurry the creaming process by putting cold butter in a hot bowl. The heat will melt the butter and change its consistency, and will ruin your cake. And don't add the sugar too fast. Now is the time to use lots of "elbow grease" on the batter, not after the flour and egg whites are folded in.

The usual butter cake calls for the egg yolks and whites separated. Beat the yolks well and add to the creamed mixture. And then add the flavoring. If you use a genuine, well-known brand of flavoring extract you will have a good flavor in your cake. By adding it to the creamed mixture it has a chance to permeate the mass and will be better blended than when it is added last of all.

Now add the melted chocolate if you are making a devil's food cake. The chocolate should be melted over hot, not boiling water, and taken from the fire just as soon as possible after it is melted. If it is left over the fire, the heat changes its color and flavor. It should be cooled thoroughly before adding to the butter and sugar and egg yolk.

Next, in keeping the texture of your cake fine, add a tablespoon or so of the sifted dry ingredients and mix it well, before adding any more. Tell you to add the dry ingredients and milk alternately. If the milk is added first, it is generally so cold it will curdle the mixture. So begin by putting in a little of the flour first.

18-Day Diet Unscientific

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The popular reduction cure at present is the 18-day diet. In my opinion it is thoroughly unscientific. The very name indicating that the reduction is to be completed in a short time, gives the whole thing away. It is a gaudy promise, opening a magic vista to the poor overweight who wants to become slender right away.

Another objection to it is that it is too vigorous.

The most important thing to take into account about reduction cures is poor, weak, fallible human nature. Overweights get hungry and thirsty. When they are asked to work at a diet which makes them acutely uncomfortable they fail and revert to their regular meals, in goodly numbers. They fall off the 18-day diet almost according to schedule. If they are just a little bit overweight they fall off on the third to fifth day. If they are 30 pounds overweight they fall off on the 10th day. If they are really serious, and reduction is imperative, they go to the 18th day. Then they fall to with a cheer, and eat enough in three days to undo all the good done in the last six of the diet.

That, at least, has been my experience in watching them.

Successful reducing must be planned to give the dieter as little discomfort as possible. It must be planned to continue indefinitely. The constitutional tendency of overweight people is to store fat so rapidly that lapses in diet result immediately in undoing the labor of days.

Successful reduction cures depend far more on the organization of the dieter's household, the general planning of habits, the mental attitude of the patient, than they do on the articles or even the amount of food eaten.

Dr. William Osler used to say that getting well of tuberculosis depends more on what you have in your head than what you have in your chest. The same idea holds true for the diabetic, the overweight person, the patient with heart disease, and the patient with ulcer of the stomach.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

P. S. Q. Elmira, N. Y.: "How can I calculate what my weight ought to be?"

Dr. Peters had a clever formula for this. It is as follows:

"Rule to find ideal adult net weight.
"Multiply number of inches over 5 feet in height by 5½, add 110.
For example: Height, 5 feet 7 inches—7 times 5½, equal 38½; add 110, gives 148½, ideal weight.

"If under 5 feet multiply number of inches under 5 feet by 5½ and subtract from 110."

Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlet on "Hygiene of Women" also is available for 10 cents.)

Like Somebody Else

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Do you know I believe that very often the strenuous efforts you young people make to forget, make you remember all the harder.

I am talking, of course, about your efforts to forget the man or girl with whom you are in love and whom you have loved.

You all have heard about the person who "enjoys poor health." Now, don't we all, at times, enjoy being heart broken? Don't we just revel in being miserable and pitying ourselves?

I think so.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I feel that I need some advice. Maybe you can give it to me. Here is my story:

"Not very long ago I met a very nice boy whom I liked at once. I was love at first sight for me. Well, I had a couple of dates with him and he seemed to like me. Then something happened. He no longer calls me up. Finally I lost interest. I went with other boys."

"I mentioned his name once or twice. He was pretty popular with both sexes, I guess. One day I happened to ask another girl whether she knew this boy. She replied, 'Oh yes, he's engaged to marry some girl.'"

"This was the last straw. Imagine my chagrin. Ever since that my heart has been broken. I have tried to forget him, but find it impossible. The other night I went to the same wiener roast. When he came up to me I said coldly 'Hello,' and walked off. He is going with other girls, I hear, too. That is what makes it so hard. But that makes me all the crazier about him. I ask you now, how can I forget him?"

"FAITHFUL FRIEND"
You say you lost interest in him. Then, when you were told that he was engaged to some other girl, you were heart broken. I suppose before you heard he was engaged you thought he might come back to you, which was what you wished, although you had "lost interest." People usually want more of what they cannot have. So when

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

Thumbing the pages of an old newspaper file we made the discovery that exactly twenty years ago the 1910 Xenia Central High football team wrote local high school gridiron history when it defeated Springfield High School for the first time. The score was either 16 to 5 or 17 to 5 we couldn't determine which, touchdowns in those days counting five points instead of six. Since that year Xenia teams have beaten Springfield only twice. Here is the complete published account of the 1910 game which may bring back memories to "Dutch" Schultz, Bill Fraver and some more of the players of that season.

"For the first time in the history of local athletics the Xenia High School has lowered the colors of its rival, the Springfield High School. Never before has the local team been able to even score against Springfield in football but the eleven this year surprised them on their own grounds Saturday afternoon.

"Schultz, of Xenia, scored the first touchdown within the first eight minutes of play. Schultz also kicked goal. The first quarter ended 6 to 0 in Xenia's favor. In the second quarter McLaughlin of Springfield, made their only touchdown. Their quarterback fumbling the ball cost them a chance to kick goal. The first half ended 6 to 5 in Xenia's favor.

"Neither side scored in the third quarter and Springfield was fast showing signs of weakening. In the last quarter McLaughlin of Springfield, secured a punt near Xenia's goal and by a line buck Schultz was pushed over for another touchdown. Goal was missed. Springfield, seeing that it could not penetrate Xenia's strong line, tried a forward pass, which was caught by Fraver of Xenia, who went across the goal line for the third touchdown after a spectacular run. In the course of which he knocked the Springfield interference aside with the ease of a runaway locomotive.

"Quarterback Baldwin deserves much credit for the skillful way he managed the team. Johnson, Schultz and Fraver made good in the back line while McNeft was there with the speed and Barnett with his brilliant tackling. The whole line made a stubborn defense which Springfield could not penetrate.

"Manager Hamilton will try to bring an Antioch team here Tuesday night, and will play Miami Military quarter at Germantown on next Saturday."

Joe Hagler, Xenia trainer, has another promising colt, which he firmly believes will be a sensation. This one is by Al Worthy, dam Medoura, the dam of Walter Sterling, the fast trotter carried by Harry Stokes a few years back. Joe is just breaking this one but he says he acts like a real one.

Joe, who campaigned the wonderful three-year-old pacer, Ray Henley, which won each and every one of his races on half-mile tracks this summer without losing a heat, plans to stake the pacer down East next year, unless he gets a too tempting offer meanwhile and disposes of him, reports say.

During the Hamilton fair Hagler is said to have been offered $6,000 and when he turned it down, the prospective buyer told him to name his own price. Joe merely shook his head and walked away. Joe plans to winter only four head and will not take on any more until Spring.

Fordham now has the distinction of being the only major college football team in the entire country which is unbeaten and untied and with no points scored against it. The undefeated Dartmouth team's goal line is still uncrossed but Harvard scored two points against the Big Green eleven on a safety last week. Fordham meets West Virginia this Saturday and should proceed.

Unbeaten and untied teams of the larger schools in the country have been reduced to fifteen, including Fordham, Dartmouth, Detroit, North Dakota, Marquette, Utah, Alabama, Kentucky, Northwestern, Oregon, Washington State, Kansas, Cornell, Georgia and Notre Dame.

Ex-Notre Dame Football Star Now Central Press Football Writer

Suppose you were to ask a group of ex-football players what they thought was the hardest act to perform in the whole football game. What do you think they would say?

There is no doubt but that eight out of every ten would answer the question this way:

"The most difficult act to perform in the gridiron game, and the one that requires the most courage to carry out is the stopping of the ball carrier. That is, just plain tackling."

That is absolutely the act that is most difficult to perform. Some few men like the hard contact game, where they get to crack the ball carrier with all of their strength and weight, but for the most part human nature tends to make the average run of football players reluctant to yearn for hard body contacts.

And this reluctance is not due to lack of courage, or what is called intestinal fortitude, but to the fact that we are all humans and do not want to get hurt.

You see all kinds of tackles in a game. By the foot, by the pants, by the shirt, around the neck and sometimes by an arm.

And you quite often see a real honest-to-goodness tackle, with the tackler hitting the ball carrier with terrific force, carrying him back several feet before dumping him in a heap. That's what makes a coach keep his interest in the game.

Tackling is a matter of keeping your eyes open, watching the ball carrier's every move, and with the feet wide apart, head up, lunging into the ball carrier, hitting him with the shoulder just above the knees.

After he is hit, the arms, which have been held wide apart, are wrapped around his legs and with one hand grabbing the wrist, pulling his legs into you as the shoulder is thrust forward. This enables the ball carrier to be dumped backward, as he should be if tackled correctly.

It is very essential that the eyes be kept open, for if not the ball carrier is liable to be missed as you lunge forward.

Note in the photo the feet wide apart, the head up, the toes pointed forward and the shoulder hitting just above the knees of the ball carrier.

The arms have been locked behind the knees of the runner and are pulling the knees together as the shoulder is thrust forward, pushing the body backward.

These are the essential things to remember concerning the actual tackling. The nerve and courage to meet the charging runner head-on must be supplied by the tackler himself.

"LITTLE BUCCANEERS" LIKE BIG BROTHERS; LOSE TO HOME

Xenia Central High's "Little Buccaneers" grid eleven dropped a heart-breaker to the O. S. and S. O. Home freshman team, 6 to 0 at Cox Field Tuesday afternoon.

The lone touchdown came in the last five seconds of play. With only a minute remaining and the ball in possession of the Bucs, Coach Patterson's proteges lost the ball on downs on their own ten-yard line, attempting an end run on fourth down. This poor judgment proved costly as the Home gained eight yards on a pass, picked up a yard on a line plunge and then scored a touchdown as the final gun barked. Attempt to add the extra point after the game was over failed.

Eight minute quarters were played and the teams battled for the most part in mid-field. The Little Bucs were in a scoring zone once in the first quarter but the Home defense stiffened.

Three Dayton teams—the Federation, Recreation and Royal—and the Grotto Bachelors of Springfield, each won three straight games in their opening matches, while Troy won two out of three. Here is the league standing:

COACH GRAVES' DISPUTE WITH UNIVERSITY REPORTED SETTLED

A misunderstanding between President Gilbert H. Jones, of Wilberforce University, and Football Coach Harry C. Graves, which led to the temporary suspension of the coach by President Jones last Monday, has virtually been ironed out, Coach Graves said Tuesday, indicating the matter is now a closed incident.

Coach Graves declared the difficulty arose over the question of the number of players to be taken on the trip to Chicago, Ill., over last week-end when Wilberforce battled Tuskegee Institute to a scoreless tie.

The athletic council had authorized transportation by train for twenty-two persons to Chicago, whereas Coach Graves desired to take twenty-seven players and three coaches, thirty in all.

The council suggested that six players make the trip by bus and when Coach Graves demurred, President Jones recommended that an effort be made to take the entire squad of thirty by train, providing the local ticket agent would "trust" the university for the extra tickets, Graves contends.

This plan, he said, did not prove satisfactory to railroad officials with the result the twenty-two round trip tickets were exchanged for fares for one way to Chicago, enabling the purchase of thirty one-way tickets.

SIDNEY - MIAMISBURG, XENIA - GREENVILLE ONLY LOOP GAMES

TROY, O., Oct. 29.—Stunned by the wholly unexpected setback in the game with Sidney last week, Troy High gridders hope to take their spite out on Tippecanoe City in a non-league game Saturday.

Tip City is supposed to have a strong eleven this season, one that lost to Miamisburg by a margin of only one touchdown, and the Trojans feel they must be on their guard in order to avoid being made the victim of another upset.

Over-confidence was largely responsible for the 13 to 6 Troy defeat by Sidney last week. Troy had anticipated an easy victory and lacked the fighting spirit displayed by Sidney.

PIQUA, O., Oct. 29.—With an undefeated record to preserve, Piqua Central High's "Indians" will encounter Lima South Saturday in a game that should test the ability of the Wertzen to the limit.

The Indians obtained another scalp last week, trouncing Greenville, 32 to 0. The squad is enthusiastic over the prospect of playing through the season undefeated and every night more than four full teams are on the field practicing.

Piqua used a new and varied offense in the Greenville game. No injuries developed but rumors of ineptitude of certain players are afloat. It is hoped nothing will come of the reports.

SIDNEY, O., Oct. 29.—Sidney High's football team came into its own last week when the Trojan horde was repulsed, 13 to 6. The Orange and Black emerged from the contest free from injuries and will meet Miamisburg in a Troy-Burger gridiron Saturday.

A unique feature of the Sidney-Troy game was that Robinson's Raiders had only one substitution. Strange still, Brown, the lone substitute, replaced Redinbo, scored both of Sidney's touchdowns.

Sidney has a Marconi in the embryo this season, namely—Lloyd Gordon. From a perch in a third-story window overlooking Julia Lamb Field, Lloyd radios dope on the game to the score board at the far end of the field—a modernistic touch.

MIAMISBURG, O., Oct. 29.—Sidney is next in line for Miamisburg here Saturday and Coach Earl O. Wright's eleven plans to continue where it left off last Friday when it beat Xenia 12 to 0.

Thumbing the pages of an old newspaper file we made the discovery that exactly twenty years ago the 1910 Xenia Central High football team wrote local high school gridiron history when it defeated Springfield High School for the first time. The score was either 16 to 5 or 17 to 5 we couldn't determine which, touchdowns in those days counting five points instead of six. Since that year Xenia teams have beaten Springfield only twice. Here is the complete published account of the 1910 game which may bring back memories to "Dutch" Schultz, Bill Fraver and some more of the players of that season:

"For the first time in the history of local athletics the Xenia High School has lowered the colors of its rival, the Springfield High School. Never before has the local team been able to even score against Springfield in football but the eleven this year surprised them on their own grounds Saturday afternoon.

"Schultz, of Xenia, scored the first touchdown within the first eight minutes of play. Schultz also kicked goal. The first quarter ended 6 to 0 in Xenia's favor. In the second quarter McLaughlin, of Springfield, made their only touchdown. Their quarterback fumbling the ball cost them a chance to kick goal. The first half ended 6 to 5 in Xenia's favor.

"Neither side scored in the third quarter and Springfield was first showing signs of weakening. In the last quarter McNeff, of Xenia, secured a punt near Xenia's goal and by a line buck Schultz was pushed over for another touchdown. Goal was missed. Springfield, seeing that it could not penetrate Xenia's strong line, tried a forward pass, which was caught by Fraver of Xenia, who went across the goal line for the third touchdown after a spectacular run, in the course of which he knocked the Springfield interference aside with the ease of a runaway locomotive.

"Quarterback Baldwin deserves much credit for the skillful way he managed the team. Johnson, Schultz and Fraver made good in the back line while McNeff was there with the speed and Barnett with his brilliant tackling. The whole line made a stubborn defense which Springfield could not penetrate.

"Manager Hamilton will try to bring an Antioch team here Tuesday night, and will play Miami Military Institute at Germantown on next Saturday."

Joe Hagler, Xenia trainer, has another promising colt, which he firmly believes will be a sensation. This one is by Al Worthing, dam Medoura, the dam of Walter Sterling, the fast trotter campaigned by Harry Stokes a few years back. Joe is just breaking this one but he says he acts like a real one.

Joe, who campaigned the wonderful three-year-old pacer, Ray Henley, which won each and every one of his races on half-mile tracks this summer without losing a heat, plans to stake the pacer down East next year, unless he gets a too tempting offer meanwhile and disposes of him, reports say.

During the Hamilton fair Hagler is said to have been offered $6,000 and when he turned it down, the prospective buyer told him to name his own price. Joe merely shook his head and walked away. Joe plans to winter only four head and will not take on any more until Spring.

The undefeated Dartmouth team's goal line is still uncrossed but Harvard scored two points against the Big Green eleven on a safety last week. ## "LITTLE BUCCANEERS" LIKE BIG BROTHERS; LOSE TO HOME

Xenia Central High's "Little Buccaneers" grid eleven dropped a heart-breaker to the O. S. and S. O. Home freshman team, 6 to 0 at Cox Field Tuesday afternoon.

The lone touchdown came in the last five seconds of play. With only a minute remaining and the ball in possession of the Bucs, Coach Patterson's proteges lost the ball on downs on their own ten-yard line, attempting an end run on fourth down. This poor judgment proved costly as the Home gained eight yards on a pass, picked up a yard on a line plunge and then scored a touchdown as the final gun barked. Attempt to add the extra point after the game was over failed.

Eight minute quarters were played and the teams battled for the most part in mid-field. The Little Bucs were in a scoring zone once in the first quarter but the Home defense stiffened.

A four-cornered tie for first place exists in the Miami Valley Traveling Bowling League at the close of the first round of play.

Three Dayton teams—the Federation, Recreation and Royal—and the Grotto Bachelors of Springfield, each won three straight games in their opening matches.

While Troy won two out of three. Here is the league standing:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Federation	3	0	1.000
Recreation	3	0	1.000
Royal	3	0	1.000
Springfield	3	0	1.000
Troy	2	1	.667
Colonial	1	2	.333
Xenia	0	3	.000
Washington C. H.	0	3	.000
Middletown	0	3	.000
Richmond, Ind.	0	3	.000

COACH GRAVES' DISPUTE WITH UNIVERSITY REPORTED SETTLED

A misunderstanding between President Gilbert H. Jones, of Wilberforce University, and Football Coach Harry C. Graves, which led to the temporary suspension of the coach by President Jones last Monday, has virtually been ironed out, Coach Graves said Tuesday, indicating the matter is now a closed incident.

Coach Graves declared the difficulty arose over the question of the number of players to be taken on the trip to Chicago, Ill., over last weekend when Wilberforce battled Tuskegee Institute to a scoreless tie.

The athletic council had authorized transportation by train for twenty-two persons to Chicago, whereas Coach Graves desired to take twenty-seven players and three coaches, thirty in all. The council suggested that six players make the trip by bus and when Coach Graves demurred, President Jones recommended that an effort be made to take the entire squad of thirty by train providing the local ticket agent would "trust" the university for the extra tickets, Graves contends.

This plan, he said, did not prove satisfactory to railroad officials with the result the twenty-two round trip tickets were exchanged for fares for one way to Chicago, enabling the purchase of thirty one-way tickets.

SIDNEY - MIAMISBURG, XENIA-GREENVILLE ONLY LOOP GAMES

TROY, O., Oct. 29.—Stunned by the wholly unexpected setback in the game with Sidney last week, Troy High gridders hope to take their spite out on Tippecanoe City in a non-league game Saturday.

Tip City is supposed to have a strong eleven this season, one that lost to Miamisburg by a margin of only one touchdown, and the Trojans feel they must be on their guard in order to avoid being made the victim of another upset.

Over-confidence was largely responsible for the 13 to 6 Troy defeat by Sidney last week. Troy had anticipated an easy victory and lacked the fighting spirit displayed by Sidney.

PIQUA, O., Oct. 29.—With an undefeated record to preserve, Piqua Central High's "Indians" will encounter Lima South Saturday in a game that should test the ability of the Wertzmen to the limit.

The Indians obtained another scalp last week, trouncing Greenville, 33 to 0. The squad is enthusiastic over the prospect of pushing through the season undefeated and every night more than four full teams are on the field practicing.

Piqua used a new and varied offense in the Greenville game. No injuries developed but rumors of ineptitude of certain players are afloat. It is hoped nothing will come of the reports.

SIDNEY, O., Oct. 29.—Sidney High's football team came into its own last week when the Trojan horde was repulsed, 13 to 6. The Orange and Black emerged from the contest free from injuries and will meet Miamisburg on the 'Burger gridiron Saturday.

A unique feature of the Sidney-Troy game was that Robinson's Raiders had only one substitution. Strange suit, Brown, the lone substitute, replaced Redinho, scored both of Sidney's touchdowns.

Sidney has a Marconi in the embryo this season, namely—Lloyd Gordon. From a perch in a third-story window overlooking Julia Lamb Field, Lloyd radios dope on the game to the score board at the far end of the field—a modernistic touch.

MIAMISBURG, O., Oct. 29.—Sidney is next in line for Miamisburg here Saturday and Coach Earl O. Wright's eleven plans to continue where it left off last Friday when it beat Xenia 12 to 0.

Piqua, leader of the Miami Valley League, had only one substitution week and the Burgers will wind up their league schedule against Greenville here November 22.

The same lineup which started against Xenia will probably be used against Sidney. Kurtz appears to have earned a berth at halfback and safety man. His aggressive game is getting better and he has shown exceptional ability in running back punts.

- "Look here," he said threateningly. "If you think you are going to get away from me, you are wrong. You are right at the start you're on the wrong track, and Willis Hanson ain't the boy you take him to be. And if you want the information I can give you, keep a civil tongue in your head, my man. That's all I've got to say!"

- The Inspector controlled a sharp report with an effort.

- "If you have any valuable information, it's time you get to it," he said, succinctly.

- "I'm not powerful good at telling a story. You'll have to make allowance for my lack of education, you know," returned Mr. Hanson, apologetically, but with a hidden note of sarcasm. "But as I was saying, I never heard of Lord What-you-may-call-'im until today, nor of this here house where I'm sitting. I started, I'm telling you, from the inn below in the town, and I had it in my mind to spend the night at Merryville but."

- "Yes..." The Inspector waited breathlessly, torn between conflicting emotions. He couldn't decide in his own mind whether this man was a superb actor and con- any connection with the crime. He any connection with the crime. He listened intently for the revelation he felt was about to come.

- "Well, as I was saying, you see it was this way," the Canadian repeated for what seemed to the Inspector the hundredth time. "I says good night to the landlord, all set to go to Merryville, and as soon as I'm on the road it gets darker and darker. The sky is just as black as ink. Then I see a flash of lightning and I reckon I'm in for it. Well, I don't relish a good wetting, especially it's my only clothes, so I decide to make a dash for shelter. I see some lights flickering, and I make for them. I turn in somewhere. I reckon it must have been just where we turned in this afternoon. Just in time, too. The rain has begun to come down, and the thunder is tremen-

IT WAS LOCKED A RAPID-FIRE MYSTERY STORY BY JOHN HAWK RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC. © 1929-30

READ THIS FIRST: The Earl of Winston's body is found in the room of Robin Smith, young poet, at a house party at Alston Manor. Robin has attended so he may see Lady Gwendolen Winston, with whom he is desperately in love. In a fit of anger the poet locks his door and jumps out of the window, returning to his attic room. The next day he is arrested and the various members of the party testify at the coroner's inquest. Bruce Armstrong, big game hunter, is on the stand.

Bruce Armstrong, big game hunter, testifies he observed a hidden enemy between Prince Pozolevsky, a guest, and the murdered man. But the evidence is strongly against Robin. Robin Smith is called to the stand.

He denies that he had anything to do with the murder. His poems are introduced by a Scotland Yard inspector.

He is held for the crime. After the inquest Lady Dorothy Alston prevails upon Gwendolen to stay at Alston Manor while Scotland Yard detectives work on the murder case.

Inspector Linscott hunts for clues. He receives a telegram from headquarters.

CHAPTER 25 Mr. Hanson paused again, and puffed reflectively.

"What time was that?" asked the Inspector sharply.

"I can tell you to the minute," replied his companion with evident satisfaction. "I looked at my watch just before I started. It was twenty minutes past nine o'clock."

"And where did you go from Alston Inn? Did you come here, to this place?" Linscott thought it was time he encouraged the fellow with a little prompting. To his surprise the other said immediately:

"That's exactly what I did. How did you know?"

"I didn't!" flung the Inspector, coming to the point abruptly. "But suppose now you tell me what you were doing here, and how long you had known Lord Winston?"

The Inspector moved his chair a few inches to better guard the door, and patted the little metal object in his pocket with a peculiar inward satisfaction.

"Why, bless your soul, Inspector, I never heard of Lord Winston in my life until that policeman stopped me in London today, and began pelting me with crazy questions."

"Be careful what you say, Mr. Hanson. It may be used against you."

The Canadian sat up very straight. His eyes narrowed ominously.

"Well, from them bushes I see two objects being thrown out of an upstairs window, and by the lightning I can just see a hand, a long white hand, then it's dark again."

"You saw that? What time was it?"

"Well," drawled the Canadian with a smile, "I didn't think to take out my watch and look. Anyhow, it would have been pretty dark and wet..."

"I mean about what time."

"Roughly, ten o'clock, I should say. I figure I'd been on the road about forty minutes before I saw that apparition... it kind of gave me the creeps... for I did think it was an apparition, until I felt about the bushes, and with the help of matches—it had almost stopped raining—discovered that it was two objects that had been thrown away, rather valuable, too, I should say!"

"The cigarette-case and watch?"

"You found them, did you? They are a right smart fellow. I'll say that for you," replied Mr. Hanson enthusiastically, but the Inspector was too engrossed in this new revelation to be interested in compliments.

"Could you identify the window?"

"I believe I could."

"And you're positive it wasn't later than ten o'clock?"

"Earlier, if anything."

"What you have told me makes a great deal of difference in the case," the Inspector assured his companion heartily. He felt still doubtful about the fellow, but was anxious to put him off his guard if possible. Certainly up to now there had been nothing suspicious. Except the fact that a Canadian should have by his own admission entered these particular grounds, and on that particular night, "Come into the garden with me, and see if you can tell which window. You say you saw only a hand, nothing more?"

"Only a hand. A man's hand. A man's? You are sure?"

"Unless there was an Amazon in the house that night!" returned Hanson jovially, as he followed the Inspector into the garden, which lay so lovely and serene in the late June twilight.

Without hesitation, Mr. Hanson pointed to the first window from the wing. It was Lady Gwendolen's room.

Inspector Linscott scrutinized the big Canadian; it was strange that he should so easily choose that particular window from some half-dozen others. His former suspicions about the stranger revived with renewed certainty. It surely was not Lady Gwendolen's room from which those valuables would have been thrown, but if thrown at all it would have been from Prince Pozolevsky's room at the other end of the house, separated from Lady Gwendolen's by four intervening windows. The Inspector determined there and then not to let this fellow escape. He decided to detain him at Alston Manor for the night, and in the mean time wire the Yard for a man to shadow his future movements. Obviously there was no chance of arresting him at present, but he did not intend to allow the fellow to disappear. Not he!

"Thank you," he said politely, when Mr. Hanson pointed to the window. "Your certainty is very illuminating. I only wonder you did not notify someone at the house of your discovery. It is very strange that..."

"Strange do you call it," interrupted the Canadian, smiling broadly again. "Perhaps there are two ways of looking at it. This is how it appeared to Willis Hanson. There those two jeweled creations came tumbling down like rain from Heaven on me, a stranger. I ain't what you'd call a shark on jewelry, but just to look at them was enough to make Willis certain that they cost a mighty lot of spandulix. I did consider picking them up and taking them to the door. The watch was still ticking. Then I came to my senses. Says I to myself: 'No one here knows you, Willis Hanson; no one knows if you're an honest man or a thief. Better keep your finger out of this pie. It don't smell right to me.' And instead of touching them things I took to my heels and returned to the village station, and jumped the first train for London, me mind made up to put space between me and the mysterious hand which was casting fine jewels into the garden all wild in that storm."

"You must have been annoyed when my man spotted you this afternoon," said the Inspector genially.

"I'm free to admit I was!" was the prompt retort. "But as soon as I heard how serious the case was, I wanted to come down and tell you all I knew. Felt it was my duty to help."

"That's very fine of you," continued the Inspector in the same friendly manner, determined to disarm any doubts of the stranger, and also, if possible, keep him overnight. "I'm certain Lady Dorothy Alston, who owns this place, will want to thank you personally, and keep you here until morning."

"That's mighty kind, but I could not impose on her. I must be getting back now I've done my bit. I was just going to ask when the next train for London leaves."

Statesman-Farmer

This British farmer is none other than the former prime minister, David Lloyd George, snapped as he gazed with pride at his orchard in Churt Surrey. His apples are said to be the finest in the country.

"What time was that?" asked the Inspector sharply.

"I can tell you to the minute," replied his companion with evident satisfaction. "I looked at my watch just before I started. It was twenty minutes past nine o'clock."

"And where did you go from Alston Inn? Did you come here, to this place?" Linscott thought it was time he encouraged the fellow with a little prompting. To his surprise the other said immediately:

"That's exactly what I did. How did you know?"

"I didn't," flung the inspector, coming to the point abruptly. "But suppose now you tell me what you were doing here, and how long you had known Lord Winston?"

The inspector moved his chair a few inches to better guard the door, and patted the little metal object in his pocket with a peculiar inward satisfaction.

"Why, bless your soul, inspector, I never heard of Lord Winston in my life until that policeman stopped me in London today, and began pelting me with crazy questions."

"Be careful what you say, Mr. Hanson. It may be used against you."

The Canadian sat up very straight. His eyes narrowed ominously.

"Look here," he said threateningly, "if you think you can bully Willis Hanson, I'll tell you right at the start you're on the wrong track, and Willis Hanson ain't the boy you take him to be. And if you want the information I can give you, keep a civil tongue in your head, my man. That's all I've got to say."

The inspector controlled a sharp retort with an effort.

"If you have any valuable information, it's time you get to it," he said, succinctly.

"I'm not powerful good at telling a story. You'll have to make allowance for my lack of education, you know," returned Mr. Hanson, apologetically, but with a hidden note of sarcasm. "But as I was saying, I never heard of Lord Winston. What you may call 'im until today, nor of this here house where I'm sitting. I started, I'm telling you, from the inn below in the town, and I had it in my mind to spend the night at Merryville but..."

"The Inspector waited breathlessly, torn between conflicting emotions. He couldn't decide in his own mind whether this man was a superb actor and con- any connection with the crime. He listened intently for the revelation he felt was about to come.

"Well, as I was saying, you see it was this way," the Canadian repeated for what seemed to the inspector the hundredth time. "I says good night to the landlady, all set to go to Merryville, and as soon as I'm on the road it gets darker and darker. The sky is just as black as ink. Then I see a flash of lightning and I reckon I'm in for it. Well, I don't relish a good wetting, seeing especially it's my only clothes, so I decide to make a dash for shelter. I see some lights flickering, and I make for them. I turn in somewhere, I reckon it must have been just where we turned in this afternoon. Just in time, too. The rain has begun to come down, and the thunder is tremendous loud. I give up the idea of reaching a house, and decide to take shelter in the nearest clump of bushes and trees. I've been warned as a boy not to go near a tree in a thunderstorm, but when I look about this yard I decide the lightning couldn't hit all the trees, and I take a chance. It was about the millionth chance I'd taken during my life, and I always came out whole, as you can see..."

He paused, and puffed at his pipe for half a minute. It seemed hours to the waiting inspector before he resumed.

"Well, it was while I am squatting in them bushes that I see something that I thought might help you. As I've said before, I didn't take that dirty ride from London all for nothing..."

"Well! What did you see?" interpolated the Inspector sharply. His nerves, used as he was to all manner of men, were getting over- abounding with this long-drawn-out account.

"Well, from them bushes I see two objects being thrown out of an upstairs window, and by the lightning I can just see a hand, a long white hand...then it's dark again."

"You saw that? What time was it?"

"Well," drawled the Canadian with a smile, "I didn't think to take out my watch and look. Anyhow, it would have been pretty dark and wet..."

"I mean about what time."

"Roughly, ten o'clock, I should say. I figure I'd been on the road about forty minutes before I saw that apparition...it kind of gave me the creeps...for I did think it was an apparition, until I felt about the bushes, and with the help of matches—I had almost stopped raining—discovered that it was two objects that had been thrown away, rather valuable, too. I should say!"

"The cigarette-case and watch?"

"You found them, did you? You are a right smart fellow. I'll say that for you," replied Mr. Hanson enthusiastically, but the inspector was too astounded in this new revelation to be interested in compliments.

"Could you identify the window?"

"I believe I could."

"And you're positive it wasn't later than ten o'clock?"

"Earlier, if anything."

"What you have told me makes a great deal of difference in the case," the inspector assured his companion heartily. He felt still doubtful about the fellow, but was anxious to put him off his guard if possible. Certainly up to now there had been nothing suspicious. Except the fact that a Canadian should have been on his admission entered these particular grounds, and on that particular night.

"Come into the garden with me, and see if you can tell which window. You say you saw only a hand, nothing more?"

"Only a hand. A man's hand."

"A man's? You are sure?"

IT WAS LOCKED A RAPID-FIRE MYSTERY STORY BY JOHN HAWK © 1929-30 RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN, INC.

READ THIS FIRST:

The Earl of Winston's body is found in the room of Robin Smith, young poet, at a house party at Alston Manor. Robin has attended so he may see Lady Gwendolen Winston, with whom he is desperately in love. In a fit of anger the poet locks his door and jumps out of the window, returning to his attic room. The next day he is arrested and the various members of the party testify at the coroner's inquest. Bruce Armstrong, big game hunter, is on the stand.

Bruce Armstrong, big game hunter, testifies he observed a hidden enemy between Prince Pozolevsky, a guest, and the murdered man. But the evidence is strongly against Robin. Robin Smith is called to the stand.

He denies that he had anything to do with the murder. His poems are introduced by a Scotland Yard inspector.

He is held for the crime. After the inquest Lady Dorothy Alston prevails upon Gwendolen to stay at Alston Manor while Scotland Yard detectives work on the murder case.

Inspector Linscott hunts for clues. He receives a telegram from headquarters.

The Theater

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials have been showing interest in a revival of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," and it develops that the studio is negotiating for talkie rights to this merry farce.

Back in 1921 the old Metro company produced "Parlor Bedroom and Bath" with Eugene Pallette and Ruth Stonehouse in leading roles and silent rights automatically went to M-G-M. with the merger of the companies.

Though the studio is noncommittal, the farce is, in all likelihood, intended for Buster Keaton. The comedian and his staff of gag-men have attended performances at the lead in Fox's "The Big Trail," played on the U. S. C. squad as Duke Morrison.

Douglas Montgomery, the stage actor on the M-G-M payroll had to be rechristened because Robert Montgomery is under contract to the same company. It was first decided to call him Robert Douglas until a Hollywood actor claimed prior right to the name and finally they compromised on Kent Douglas. He was leading man to Joan Crawford in "Within the Law" and his work was liked so well that he will play opposite Joan in "Dance, Fools, Dance."

Joseph DeGrasse, who used to be well known in the silents, now lives at Sonoma, Calif., where he has taken up painting in oils.

Twenty Years '10- Ago -'30

Justice Hughes is being mentioned for appointment as chief justice of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Paul Fockey left for New York City, where she will spend several weeks with relatives.

A span of 100 years has been completed by the congregation of the First United Presbyterian Church. Since last Sunday the congregation has been observing "Centennial Week."

The public safety director reported to city council that funds in his department are exhausted, and that at least $2,000 will be needed to conduct his department until January 1.

LOIS MORAN

El Capital Theater in Hollywood. Charlotte Greenwood, who is very popular in Hollywood, stars in the current stage revival. Her husband is head of the music department of M-G-M. but no mention has been made of her for the talkies. She was seen here in the talkie version of "So Long Letty."

Lois Moran, the youthful screen actress, has decided to enter Columbia University to take courses in political economy, psychology, philosophy and Spanish. After her studies are completed she expects to take a vacation, probably in Europe, before returning to Hollywood in May.

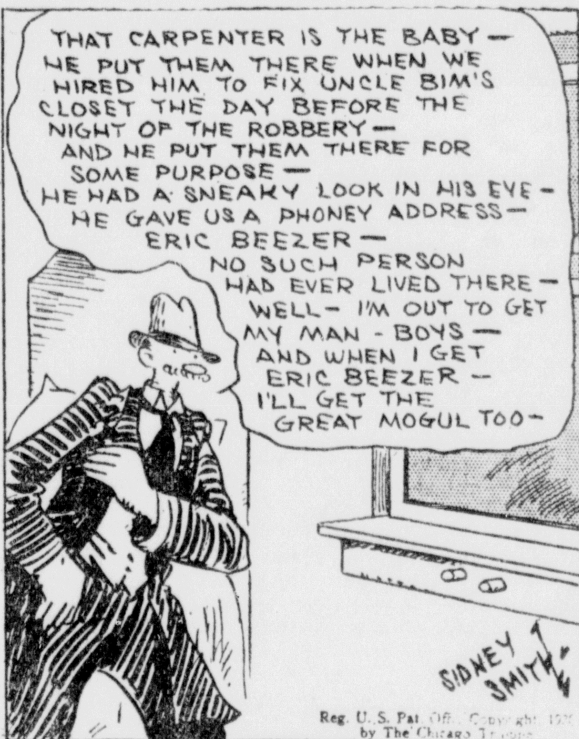

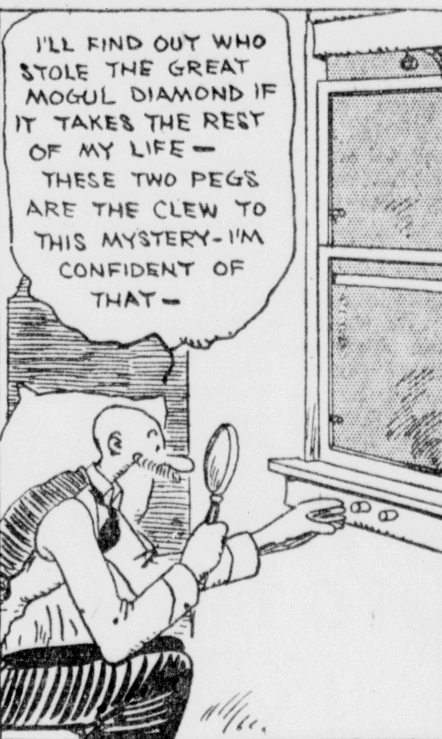

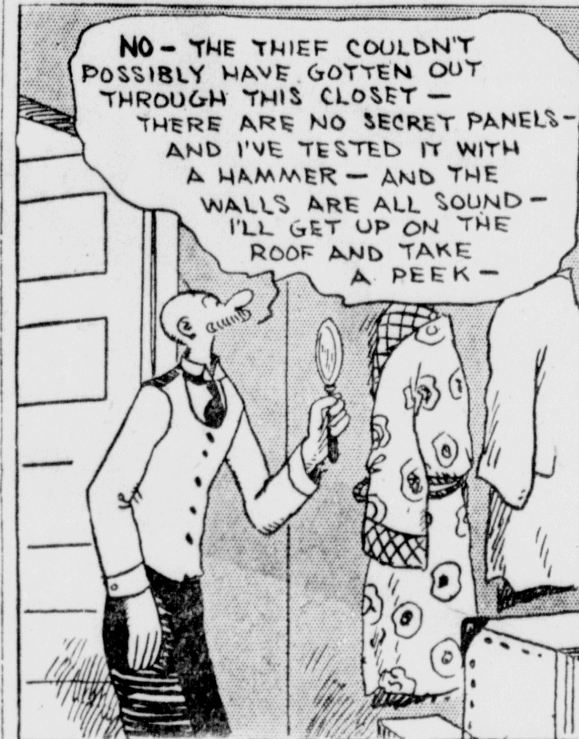

While waiting for First National to reopen, Dorothy Mackaill will make a second picture for Fox, "This Modern World." In magazine form the story was "Baskerville" and was one of the first of Eleanor Mercein's popular series. Warner Baxter will play the masculine lead in the picture and Zasu Pitts will also be in the cast.

Hollywood turned out last Saturday for the football game between the University of Southern California and Stanford which the former won easily. U. S. C. is a favorite with the picture makers and there is little work in the studios on the days of big games. Most of the U. S. C. players are personally known to the stars for they have worked in football pictures on almost every lot. One of them is in a fair way of becoming a star himself. John Wayne, the

The Theater

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials have been showing interest in a revival of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," and it develops that the studio is negotiating for talkie rights to this merry farce.

Back in 1921 the old Metro company produced "Parlor Bedroom and Bath" with Eugene Pallette and Ruth Stonehouse in leading roles and silent rights automatically went to M-G-M. with the merger of the companies.

Though the studio is noncommittal, the farce is, in all likelihood, intended for Buster Keaton. The comedian and his staff of gag-men have attended performances at the lead in Fox's "The Big Trail," played on the U. S. C. squad as Duke Morrison.

Douglas Montgomery, the stage actor on the M-G-M. payroll had to be rechristened because Robert Montgomery is under contract to the same company. It was first decided to call him Robert Douglas. He was leading man to Joan Crawford in "Within the Law" and his work was liked so well that he will play opposite Joan in "Dance, Fools, Dance."

Joseph DeGrasse, who used to be well known in the silents, now lives at Sonoma, Calif., where he has taken up painting in oils.

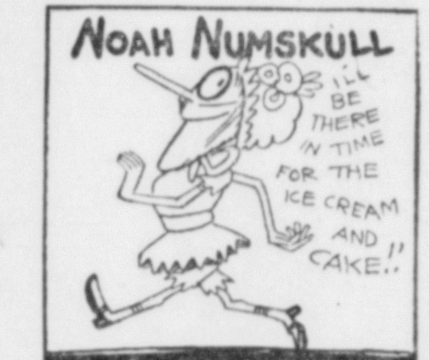

LOIS MORAN

El Capital Theater in Hollywood. Charlotte Greenwood, who is very popular in Hollywood, stars in the current stage revival. Her husband is head of the music department of M-G-M. but no mention has been made of her for the talkies. She was seen here in the talkie version of "So Long Letty."

Lois Moran, the youthful screen actress, has decided to enter Columbia University to take courses in political economy, psychology, philosophy and Spanish. After her studies are completed she expects to take a vacation, probably in Europe, before returning to Hollywood in May.

While waiting for First National to reopen, Dorothy Mackaill will make a second picture for Fox, "This Modern World." In magazine form the story was "Baskerville" and was one of the first of Eleanor Mercein's popular series. Warner Baxter will play the masculine lead in the picture and Zasu Pitts will also be in the cast.

Hollywood turned out last Saturday for the football game between the University of Southern California and Stanford which the former won easily. U. S. C. is a favorite with the picture makers and there is little work in the studios on the days of big games. Most of the U. S. C. players are personally known to the stars for they have worked in football pictures on almost every lot. One of them is in a fair way of becoming a star himself. John Wayne, the

LEGION POST OPENS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE EARLY IN NOVEMBER

Setting a goal of 300 members for the Joseph P. Flood Post No. 95 in 1930-31, the membership committee of the veterans organization outlined plans for this year's drive at a meeting in the new armory Tuesday night. Guy McCoy is chairman of the committee and other members are Ernest J. Managan, Paul Halder, Herman Wells and Robert McWilliams.

"Every member a member" will be the slogan of the drive. Ministers of various churches are to be asked to co-operate in the designation of November 4 to November 11 as "National Legion Week" with mention of the post membership campaign at Sunday services.

Merchants are also to be asked to give space to window displays for the campaign ending with the dedication of the new armory on Armistice Day.

Each member of the committee has been assigned a definite portion of the task of carrying on the drive this year and it is expected that results from this systematic method will be greater than in many years.

Other towns in Greene County outside of Xenia where there is no Legion post are to be taken care of, and will be thoroughly canvassed for legion members.

It is planned to erect the bulletin board used in previous years on the Court House lawn as an "Honor Roll" where each man's name will be placed as he pays his 1931 dues.

EXPLAIN TAX LEVY AT PUPIL ASSEMBLY

An assembly was held Wednesday afternoon at Central High School for the purpose of explaining the three mill levy to the students of Central junior and senior high schools. The school band furnished special music.

F. R. Woodruff, acting superintendent of schools, explained the purpose of the levy from the standpoint of the board of education and the entire school unit, and B. F. Cranor, acting principal, also stressed the importance of its passage.

Miss Faye Cavanaugh, bookkeeping teacher and physical education instructor for girls in the school, explained the problem from the viewpoint of a faculty member.

Lester Price, senior, gave a short talk on the subject as a representative of the student body.

All pointed out the levy does not increase taxes and that if it fails to pass the schools will be able to operate only six months out of the year and a number of subjects would be dropped that are now being carried.

WILL OHIO WOMEN BE DECEIVED?

Dear Mr. Editor:

Following a study of prohibition in the United States, Dr. Lionel B. Fletcher of New Zealand observes: "One wonders at the success with which an organized campaign of lying meets." A startling example of this is being staged in Ohio today. This week the women of Ohio have been mailed copies of articles written by a "wet" candidate for senator, and Miss Ida M. Tarbell. The first, "A Sound View of the Prohibition Problem," is comparatively harmless because of its biased and selfish point of view. In one breath this aspirant to office praises the 18th Amendment and proceeds to condemn it to death in the next. It is void of sound sense and is the most unsound view on the prohibition problem that I have yet read. His argument is as clear as mud!

Ida M. Tarbell's article however, is worthy of careful examination. In her hand the pen is mightier than the sword. Her "human interest" point of view arrests the attention and stirs the heart. The almost tragic truth, however, is that here her "human interest stories" constitute but bait to deceive and to discriminate the falsehoods manufactured by the brewery-backed Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. It is almost unbelievable that, without giving credit for her figures to this Association, she has used them as the basis or backbone of her argument against prohibition. These very statements have recently been nailed as nothing but "lies" by Col. Amos W. Woodcock, Federal Administrator. Instead of more liquor being consumed now than in 1914, Col. Woodcock declares that actual findings disclose that it is at least 60 per cent less. Instead, as Miss Tarbell declares, of an ever increasing use of liquor, Col. Woodcock announces, "Consumption of alcoholic liquor in the United States is growing less from year to year." Col. Woodcock is not a fanatical "dry" and is necessarily quite careful as to his statements. Yet he tells us that the figures Miss Tarbell gives as to the amount of liquor consumed is just about 106 million gallons beyond the actual amount used! Therefore her "wet" Association figures as to the cost of the same is absolutely absurd. This organization which furnished Miss Tarbell with her information has reported, as required by law, to the Clerk of the House of Representatives at Washington, spending almost $600,000.00 this year—to August 31 to aid in the election of "wet" candidates. Much of this they admit was spent in Ohio to secure the nomination of a "wet" senator! Will it not be interesting to see how much more will be spent in seeking his election? In striking contrast a similar report made by the much maligned Anti-Saloon League for the period ending September 10, discloses an expenditure of less than $1,000 for campaign purposes!

Yes, we are amazed that a woman of Miss Tarbell's standing should yield herself so recklessly into the hands of such an unholy alliance. The women of Ohio, the educators, the ministers, and all others who have worked and prayed for the triumph of temperance are not so easily deceived. All deplore the fact that many defy the law of the land and sell their very honor, patriotism, and souls to aid, abet, or engage in the lawless traffic today. But we take issue with the "wets" who, as Miss Tarbell, blame the prohibition law. It is not the law but the liquor, or the love of liquor, that is to blame. Moreover, we resent the demand made by Miss Tarbell that the "drys" at once seek a "substitute" to slip into the place of the 18th Amendment. What substitute has not been tried and found woefully wanting? All such supposed substitutes are but subterfuges! We will not surrender to the Whiskey Rebellion of 1930. Rather we will lift our voices with Jane Adams of Hull House Chicago, "Don't change the law—enforce it!" This is the cry raised this week by the Women's Christian Temperance Union at their State Convention. It is the call issued by the Federation of Women's Clubs of Ohio. Compliance with, instead of defiance of, the sacred law of our land is the only sane, safe, and satisfactory solution for this and every other problem of law and order.
